Ex-Italian Officials To Face Charges In Bribe Scandal

ROME (AP) — Leftist members of the parliamentary commission investigating the Lockheed payoff scandal united against the Christian Democrats Wednesday night to bring preliminary charges of corruption against Former Premier Mariano Rumor, two former defense ministers and a former air force chief of staff.

Named with Rumor, a fixture in Christian Democratic governments since 1968, were former defense ministers Luigi Gui, also a Christian Democrat, and Mario Tanassi, a Democratic Socialist, and Gen. Duilio Fanali.

The committee action was a reflection of the strong position the Communists won in the June parliamentary election. Four days before the voting, the Christian Democrats were able to defeat a demand by the Communists that Rumor, Gui and Tanassi be brought to trial. But in the 10-9 committee vote Wednesday, the two Socialist members and an independent leftist voted with the seven Communists to charge Rumor, while only the member from the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI) voted with the eight Christian Democrats.

Only the Christian Democrats voted against charging Gui, and the votes to charge Tanassi and Fanali were unanimous.

All four men have denied receiving any of the $1.6 million which a Lockheed memorandum, uncovered by a U.S. Senate subcommittee, said was paid to promote the sale of 14 C130 cargo planes to the Italian air force.

The four were in office at various times during the late 1960s when the sale was being negotiated. Francesco D'Angelosante, a Communist member of the parliamentary commission, reported in June after an investigating trip to the United States that Rumor was "Antelope Cobbler," the code name used by the Lockheed memorandum for an Italian premier involved in the payoff, and Tanassi was the bagman.

The commission said it was considering also bringing charges of fraud against Gui, Tanassi and unnamed persons outside the government.

The commission's charges were preliminary in nature because its investigation is still going on. The four men charged must now answer the charges before the commission, which will then recommend to Parliament whether to initiate criminal proceedings. If Parliament votes to prosecute, the case goes to the constitutional court.

VFW Promoting Merry Yule For Needy Kids

On Christmas Eve, the Circleville Post of the Veterans of Foreign War will offer baskets of goodies to all underprivileged children in the county.

To accomplish this, members are selling raffle tickets for cash prizes and soliciting donations from area industries. According to Les Merrill, chairman of the Community Christmas Tree project, raffle sales are slow, and VFW members are not sure they will reach the goal.

Merrill asks all community members to donate to this cause to assure its success. Raffle tickets are being sold by all VFW members and donations will be accepted at the VFW Post, 217 N. Court St.

Merrill said this is the first year this project has been attempted in Circleville, and he has high hopes for its success.

Community Christmas Tree's goal is to provide all underprivileged children in the county, 12-years-old and under, with a basket of goodies for Christmas day. Included in this packet is candy, nuts, oranges, apples and tangerines.

Part of the goodies planned for the gifts have already been purchased according to Merrill. He plans on buying the fruit wholesale from either Roanoke, Va. or Winston Salem, N.C.

Merrill said if they receive the donations soon, VFW members will have a better idea of how much can be purchased for the youngsters.

If any person in the community has a question about the project or would like to lend a helping hand, Merrill asks that he be called at 474-7794.

Rap Steel Price Hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials say President Ford probably won't jawbone the steel industry to roll back its new price increases, but the incoming Democratic administration is signaling its willingness to adopt that technique.

Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale, expressing concern about inflation, criticized the steel industry's 6 per cent boost in prices on a major product as a "very ominous pattern for the economy."

The new prices, which took effect Wednesday, cover flatrolled steel, the kind that goes into such consumer goods as autos and appliances.

Mondale's comments, coupled with President-elect Carter's public urgings Monday that the industry roll back the prices, brought comparisons with President John F. Kennedy's confrontation with the steel industry in 1962.

Kennedy used jawboning, consisting of both criticism to rally public sentiment and governmental pressures, to persuade the steel industry to rescind its price increases.

L. William Seidman, Ford's economic aide, said Wednesday it is unlikely the White House will pressure the steel industry to reduce prices beyond issuing a report by the Council of Wage and Price Stability.

"In general, we have not felt that jawboning is an effective tool," Seidman said. "We still don't."

The wage and price council canceled a news conference Wednesday that had been scheduled to allow its director, William Lilley III, to issue a report criticizing the hike.

Lilley said Tuesday that demand for steel was too slack for the companies to justify a price hike.

A spokesman said the news conference was canceled to allow Lilley to gather more information. No date was given for any future briefing.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said he knew of no pressures on Lilley to tone down his criticism. Nessen said Ford would comment on the price action after he receives the council's report. Nessen also echoed Seidman, saying that "in a general way, the President does not believe jawboning is an effective way to fight inflation."

But the incoming Democrats showed no such reluctance.

Mondale criticized the timing of the steel industry's move and contended it is hard to "escape the conclusion" that steel companies are taking advantage of the transition period between two presidents.

Carter on Monday asked the steel companies to cancel the hike because, he said, such an increase would aggravate inflation and give the petroleum exporting countries an excuse to raise oil prices.

No Job Rut For Ferryboat Captain

OXFORD, Md. (AP) — Life a readmill? Same old grind, same old rut? Take cheer, then, from Gilbert Clark.

"I've never thought of it as a rut," Clark said. "I'd rather do what I do than anything else. It's a simple life, but it's a good life. I have no ambition to do anything else."

What Gilbert Clark does, day in and day out, is run a ferryboat.

Let other mortals stew and fret over bosses and budgets and business deals. Clark is perfectly content to drive his little ferryboat back and forth, back and forth, across the Tred Avon River on Maryland's Eastern Shore, and at nightfall tie it to a dock in this antique village, go home, and reflect on his happy lot.

He loves his work, he loves his boat. A sign in his pilot house says: "This is my boat and I'll do as I damn please." It could stand as Capt. Gilbert Clark's autobiography.

No less does he love the area where he does his work. He selected it after search and deliberation.

"All rivers and bays and inlets are places of beauty," he said. "But this river and the others," he said, his arm sweeping the surrounding scenery, "the Choptank, the Miles, the Wye, the Chester, well, I just don't think there is another place like it on earth."

Indeed. And no moment quite like the present in this lovely piece of geography, for now is the time of the geese.

Now is the time when the gray December sky is necklaced daily with wafting chevrons of black, and in the corn stubble hundreds of those marvelous birds, thousands of them, tens of thousands of them, gabble and honk in America's annual miracle of migration.

"I always hate to see them leave," Capt. Clark said. "But they always come back."

Predictability, one can well imagine, is something that would appeal to a ferryboat pilot, and all the more to Gilbert Clark. He represents the fourth

President's Half Brother Crash Victim

LEBANON, Tenn. (AP) — Leslie Henry King, President Ford's 53-year-old half brother, was killed today when his car collided head-on with a tractor-trailer on Interstate 40 near this central Tennessee town, police said.

A White House spokesman said shortly after state police announced King's death that President Ford had not yet been informed of the accident.

State police Sgt. Ron Hill said King's car was westbound in the eastbound lane of the Interstate when it hit the tractor-trailer. King, a resident of Cookeville, Tenn., where he owned an auto parts store, was alone in the car and apparently was killed outright, Hill said.

The driver of the tractor-trailer, Billy Hudson, was not injured, Hill said. Hill said it took more than an hour to cut King's body from the tangled wreckage.

Witnesses told police that King had been driving in the wrong direction for several miles, Hill said.

Operators of Citizens Band radios who saw King driving the wrong way said they tried unsuccessfully to warn him off the highway.

His body was taken to McFarland Hospital in Lebanon.

Hill said an investigation would be made.

Weather

Mostly cloudy with a chance of snow flurries and temperatures falling into the teens by this afternoon. Cloudy and very cold tonight with temperatures near zero. Increasing cloudiness Friday with a high near 20. Chance of precipitation, 40 per cent today and 20 per cent tonight and Friday. Wednesday's high was 39 with a low during the night of 23. There was one-fourth of an inch of new snow bringing the total on the ground to one and one-fourth inches.

generation of Clarks in the ferry business.

He swears he can remember, as a baby boy, being perched on the wheel housing of this very boat, the Southside, as his father spun its wheel and worked its levers.

"My great-grandfather started the ferry from Shelter Island to Sag Harbor in Long Island Sound, towing scows with sailboats. My brother still runs that ferry," Clark said.

"Another family had the ferry on the north side of Shelter Island, we had the one on the south side. That's where my boat got her name. I sailed her down here from Long Island Sound."

The trip across the mile-wide Tred Avon River takes eight minutes, long enough for Clark to scamper around collecting tolls; the boat holds only seven cars.

Clark can make the crossing with his eyes closed — has made it, in fact, in dense fog and 70-mile winds. Once docked, he doesn't bother to recross the river until he sees a big orange flag go up on the other side, signifying a waiting customer.

"No sense having a regular schedule," he said. "No sense at all. Just take it as it comes."

Broken Pipe Fells Ceiling At Circleville Manor Home

Four residents of the Circleville Manor Nursing Home escaped injury early Thursday morning when an overhead fire sprinkler system ruptured and forced the stucco ceiling to fall in two rooms.

A nurse, Mary Duvall, and two aides, Carolyn Herron and Linda Westenberg, suffered minor injuries from falls they received while attempting to evacuate residents from B Wing of the nursing home, according to Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Jim Fite.

The three injured women were referred to doctors for treatment.

The incident occurred when a 2 1/2 inch water line, which is used for a fire sprinkler system, broke above room 17 in B Wing. The pipe apparently broke at the union pipe joint section, which connects two pipes.

The resulting overflow, accompanied by great force according to Deputy Fite, forced the ceiling to fall in Rooms 17 and 19.

The ceiling fell directly on Virginia Jackson, 72, a resident of Room 19, and partially fell on Edna Ater, 90; Hattie Riffe, 92; and Amy Conte, 85.

The four ladies were examined by members of the Circleville Emergency Medical Team, but were apparently unhurt.

Twenty-five residents in B Wing were evacuated from their rooms to other sections of the nursing home by members of the Circleville and Pickaway Township Fire Department, Deputy Fite, and the two nurses and four aides on duty at the time.

About two and a half inches of water was covering the entire floor of B Wing, according to Deputy Fite. The beds and all equipment in Rooms 17 and 19 were damaged, with extensive damage reported to the ceiling of both rooms.

Some equipment was also damaged in other rooms of the wing, Deputy Fite said.

Carpet in the front offices and lobby area sustained heavy damage from the overflow of water. Nurses, aides, and firefighters attempted to sweep the water from the building, but a carpet cleaning service had to be summoned to vacuum the excess water.

A total of four fire trucks were dispatched to the nursing home, along with the CEMT. The broken sprinkler line apparently activated the fire alarm in the nursing home.

No estimate of damage has been set by Circleville Manor owner Charlie Nelson. But damage costs will be "quite extensive," according to Deputy Fite.

DAMAGED ROOM AT CIRCLEVILLE MANOR

Wheeling, Dealing In Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Behind the famous Boardwalk, the wheeling and dealing for financial position is on as this decaying resort city dreams of regaining its former elegance with the help of casino gambling.

The scramble "is now at fever pitch," said Albert A. Marks Jr., an investment banker who heads the Miss America Pageant here.

"But it should rapidly dry up into cold, hard business deals which should be the economic basis for the benefits of casino gambling," he said.

After New Jersey voters in the Nov. 2 election authorized casinos here, city officials predicted that gambling might begin by early 1978.

"I haven't seen this sort of optimism borne out by facts since 1930, when we were at the tail end of our heyday," said Marks.

Already there have been these developments:

—A bill was introduced in the legislature to regulate 16-hour gambling and grant casino licenses to hotels with at least 400 rooms. Three existing hotels — Howard Johnson's Regency, the Dennis and Chalfonte-

Haddon Hall — seem to qualify.

—National, Eastern and Northwest Orient airlines have applied for permission to fly to nearby Atlantic City Airport. Now only Allegheny Airlines runs a 19-passenger shuttle flight between here and Philadelphia.

—Resorts International Inc., a Florida-based firm with hotels and a gambling casino in the Bahamas, says it will build a $50 million, 1,000-room hotel on the Boardwalk. It also plans to renovate the 1,101-room Chalfonte-Haddon, which it bought for $5.2 million during the summer.

—Playboy says it wants to open a croupier's school here and is thinking about building a casino-hotel. Playboy owns four casinos in Britain.

—The FBI says organized crime is already trying to move in on the local vending machine and garbage removal industries. This follows a visit by a Miami associate of reputed gangster Meyer Lansky shortly after the referendum passed.

—William Whitner, a Charleston, S.C., developer, plans to break ground next month for a 30-story, 660-room hotel on a choice Boardwalk location adjacent to Convention Hall.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose a bit again today in early trading. The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up a fraction and rising issues on the New York Stock Exchange held a 3-2 lead on those declining.

In the news background, the plans President-elect Jimmy Carter has for dealing with the economy were still uncertain.

Carter's press spokesman said that after a meeting with 16 economists, bankers and businessmen Wednesday no decision has been made on a tax cut or other economic stimulation.

Carter was said to be convinced that the economy is in worse shape than he originally thought.

Early prices today included Buttes Gas & Oil, off 1/4 at 18 1/4; Dome Mines, up 1/2 at 44; and Belden Corp., up 1/4 at 25 1/4.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.16 to 949.38. Advancing issues on the NYSE led those declining by an 8-5 margin.

Volume on the Big Board rose to 21.96 million shares from 17.03 million Tuesday.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .23 to 55.03. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .30 to close at 99.24.

Ford May Request Discrimination Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — As one of his last official acts, President Ford may ask Congress to outlaw sex discrimination in the multitude of federally funded programs reaching almost every American community.

White House and Justice Department officials said Wednesday they are drafting legislation that would prohibit anyone receiving federal funds from discriminating against women in their employment practices and in any other aspect of their operations.

This would give women the legal protection that Congress gave blacks and other racial minorities in the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

It would mean thousands of state and local governments and private groups receiving federal funds for public projects would risk losing the money if they failed to treat women the same as men.

Jeanne Holm, the President's special assistant for women's affairs, said her staff has been working on the proposal for several months and she expects to submit a final draft to Ford soon.

In an interview, she said she hopes Ford will offer the legislation in his final State of the Union message before leaving office Jan. 20. She indicated many White House staff members favor such a step.

She said the legislation would "prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status" in any federal program of financial assistance.

Assistant Atty. Gen. J. Stanley Pottinger, head of the department's civil rights division told a news conference such legislation is a vital tool to protect the rights of women in some 400 federal programs spending about $50 billion a year.

Under present law, sex discrimination is banned in only 17 federal programs, including revenue sharing, highway construction and crime control.

The hundreds of other programs offering federal money for schools and sewers, hospitals and drug treatment and all sorts of social projects contain no requirement that women be treated equally, partly because they were enacted before women's rights became a national issue.

Pottinger called the news conference to announce new regulations to tighten enforcement of the ban on racial discrimination.

"We hope the effect will be to make it clear to every recipient of federal funds that they have an obligation not to discriminate," he asserted. "I hope those who are discriminating will not get away with it."

The regulations require the 28 government agencies that give out money to ensure that applicants comply with the law before approving grants.

See Peace Initiative In Middle East

PARIS (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin says he expects a major Arab-Israeli peace initiative next year, but he said that even without a formal accord Israel is ready to work with its Arab neighbors "on any aspect of economic co-operation."

In an interview with the newspaper France Soir, Rabin also said Israel is ready to make territorial concessions to the Arabs but will not return to her frontiers before the 1967 war.

"I am sure that 1977 will be marked by a new initiative in view of establishing in what measure it would be possible to take a sharp turn leading from war to peace, to a peace confirmed by a treaty," Rabin told France Soir publisher Paul Winkler.

But even without a treaty, he said, "we are absolutely ready to realize with our neighbors projects of an economic character advantageous for us all."

"We are ready to collaborate in the field of communications, for example. Why not build a railroad linking Egypt to Lebanon, to Syria, to Turkey, across Israeli territory?"

"Why not search together for the best way to collectively use water resources in the region? Why not draw up projects to use different sources of energy to our mutual advantage?"

"We are ready to approach any aspect of economic cooperation even outside political accord — if our neighbors are disposed to do so as well."

He said one avenue to a formal settlement would be to reconvene the Geneva peace conference, but he reiterated Israel's opposition to the presence there of Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

The main problem in peace negotiations would not be the Palestinian question, Rabin said. "The heart of the conflict... is that the Arabs aren't ready to admit the legitimacy of the existence of Israel."

Dead Boy's Rites Slated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (A) — Funeral services were scheduled today for Jason Litton, an 11-year-old boy whose body was found frozen and covered with snow last Monday in the backyard of a home on the city's far north side.

A preliminary coroner's report has indicated the boy died from a cause other than freezing, possibly from inhaling some foreign substance, such as glue.

Coroner William Adrien said he found vomit in young Litton's lungs and trachea, suggesting the death had been accidental and may have been induced by intake of some substance from an aerosol can. However, Adrien said the cause of death will not be known until next week when toxicology tests are completed.

The youth's father, James Litton, says his son never sniffed glue and wants investigators to move their probe for the cause of death in another direction.

Adrien said the position of the body had not changed for more than 24 hours — before snowfall began Sunday night.

Air Violations Announced

CHICAGO (AP) — Four companies in Ohio have been issued sulfur dioxide violation notices by the U.S. Environmental Agency, charging them with violating federal emission regulations.

EPA's Midwest regional office here issued its first 30-day notices of violation Wednesday against the Municipal light plant in Cleveland, Columbus Coated Fabric in Columbus, Grief Board Corp. in Navarre and Kaul Clay Co. in Toronto.

If after consultation with the EPA, the four companies don't comply with the federal sulfur dioxide standards, the EPA may take them to court for compliance.

George Alexander, Midwest regional administrator for EPA, said the federal standards are in effect because Ohio's sulfur dioxide standards were ruled invalid and state didn't adopt new ones. The EPA adopted sulfur dioxide standards on Aug. 27.

Alexander said the EPA has identified 971 sulfur dioxide polluters in Ohio, but many of the biggest ones are appealing the regulations and have obtained a court order staying compliance until the appeal is resolved. He said these large emitters of sulfur dioxide are primarily coalburning utilities and steel companies.

Prison Security Eyed At Lucasville

LUCASVILLE, Ohio, (AP) — New security measures are being considered for the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility here, where three escape attempts involving 13 inmates occurred within 11 days of each other.

One measure discussed, at least by local residents, has been an electrified fence. However, a corrections department spokesman said the electrified fences are not being given serious consideration because of the risk of injury to innocent persons.

"That just comes up time and time again," said department spokesman Joseph Ashley. "To my knowledge, there's never been any serious consideration of it."

All 13 inmates were recaptured and returned to the maximum security prison, and prison authorities say eight of those may have simply been caught up in the attempts of the five others.

John P. Canney, a member of a team investigating the crashouts and a chief of the institutions division in the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction, said options are being considered to slow fleeing inmates so patrol vehicles can reach them. The penitentiary is surrounded now by eight guard towers linked by parallel cyclone fences, each 12 feet high and topped by three feet of slanted barbed wire.

Others investigating the security include E. Blaine Haskins, department assistant director, and Frank Carnein, department security administrator.

In Scioto County where the prison is located, residents have urged House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, to reopen a legislative committee study that was started earlier in 1976.

The study, led by Rep. Robert W. Jaskulski, D-11 Garfield Heights, provided a number of recommendations, but rejected community suggestions that rolled, barbed wire or electrified fences be installed.

"Electric fences would be costly and many people would regard them as inhumane devices," the committee wrote.

"In any case, people rather than security devices probably make the most difference in controlling escapes."

Canney said guards have already been given more firearms training, at the recommendation of the committee.

Other security measures being instituted include more lighting by buildings and recreation fields, duty officers have to verify in writing that they inspected windows and doors for tampering, and prisoners are searched before being taken for medical treatment.

Canney said investigators have yet to determine how one inmate obtained a weapon used in one escape attempt.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose a bit again today in early trading. The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up a fraction and rising issues on the New York Stock Exchange held a 3-2 lead on those declining.

In the news background, the plans President-elect Jimmy Carter has for dealing with the economy were still uncertain.

Carter's press spokesman said that after a meeting with 16 economists, bankers and businessmen Wednesday no decision has been made on a tax cut or other economic stimulation.

Carter was said to be convinced that the economy is in worse shape than he originally thought.

Early prices today included Buttes Gas & Oil, off 1/4 at 18 1/4; Dome Mines, up 1/4 at 44; and Belden Corp., up 1/4 at 25 1/4.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.16 to 949.38.

Advancing issues on the NYSE led those declining by an 8-5 margin.

Volume on the Big Board rose to 21.96 million shares from 17.03 million Tuesday.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .23 to 55.03.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .30 to close at 99.24.

Prison Security Eyed At Lucasville

LUCASVILLE, Ohio, (AP) — New security measures are being considered for the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility here, where three escape attempts involving 13 inmates occurred within 11 days of each other.

One measure discussed, at least by local residents, has been an electrified fence. However, a corrections department spokesman said the electrified fences are not being given serious consideration because of the risk of injury to innocent persons.

"That just comes up time and time again," said department spokesman Joseph Ashley. "To my knowledge, there's never been any serious consideration of it."

All 13 inmates were recaptured and returned to the maximum security prison, and prison authorities say eight of those may have simply been caught up in the attempts of the five others.

John P. Canney, a member of a team investigating the crashouts and a chief of the institutions division in the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction, said options are being considered to slow fleeing inmates so patrol vehicles can reach them. The penitentiary is surrounded now by eight guard towers linked by parallel cyclone fences, each 12 feet high and topped by three feet of slanted barbed wire.

Others investigating the security include E. Blaine Haskins, department assistant director, and Frank Carnein, department security administrator.

In Scioto County where the prison is located, residents have urged House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, to reopen a legislative committee study that was started earlier in 1976.

The study, led by Rep. Robert W. Jaskulski, D-11 Garfield Heights, provided a number of recommendations, but rejected community suggestions that rolled, barbed wire or electrified fences be installed.

"Electric fences would be costly and many people would regard them as inhumane devices," the committee wrote.

"In any case, people rather than security devices probably make the most difference in controlling escapes."

Canney said guards have already been given more firearms training, at the recommendation of the committee.

Other security measures being instituted include more lighting by buildings and recreation fields, duty officers have to verify in writing that they inspected windows and doors for tampering, and prisoners are searched before being taken for medical treatment.

Canney said investigators have yet to determine how one inmate obtained a weapon used in one escape attempt.

Election Fund Surplus

Now that the dust has settled over the 1976 presidential election, how did the new federal campaign financing arrangement work out? The answer to that question depends in large part upon who is asked.

Minor party candidates — and there were a flock of them this year — are not pleased at all. They were totally excluded from any public financing unless they were able to obtain at least 5 per cent of the national vote, and even then they could apply for public funding only retroactively. The highest vote any of the independents received was about 1 per cent nationally, far short of the required number.

As for the two major party contenders, the funding procedure went relatively smoothly as far as it went. But there are critics in both major parties who say the amount allocated for this year's contest — only a fraction of the total spent in 1972 — was not enough, and the limit might well be higher in 1980.

As it was, the fund created by the $1 tax checkoff on individual tax returns over the last several years ended the campaign with about $23 million on hand. More than $72 million was spent from these funds, about one-third of it to the primary campaign contenders and the other two-thirds to cover the costs of the two major party national conventions and the general election.

Assuming the tax checkoff continues to accumulate at a rate of $30 million a year, the kitty for the 1980 election could be over $150 million. That prospect already is creating a renewed effort by some members of Congress to include their campaign financing under public funding.

On Pins And Needles

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — I have not yet taken my swine flu vaccination. There are a couple of reasons for this — neither of which involve the popular fear, aroused by an abominable series of coincidences, that the vaccine could be more dangerous than the disease.

My reasons for withholding my arm from the injector are these: 1 - the vaccine didn't become available for under-elderlies until a few days ago in our town, and 2 - a public health official told me last July that if Americans didn't get their vaccinations before mid-November, it might be too late. The potential flu season would already have advanced too far for the immunology to take effect.

I'm sure public health would retract that time estimate now, in the hope of seeing through its massive $135-million effort to stave off a possible pandemic such as the one in 1918-19 which killed millions. I can hear a small medico-bureaucratic voice saying "It's never too late to avert disaster - disregard previous warnings."

So undoubtedly this week I shall give in to the better safe than sorry ethic, even though Dr. Linus Pauling, the famous and sometimes controversial author of "Vitamin C and the Common Cold," tells me it is not necessary. According to Dr. Pauling: "It now seems quite unlikely that there will be a swine-flu epidemic; and there is little justification for recommending mass vaccination."

He speculates that the high mortality of the swine flu pandemic of 1918 might have resulted from the malnutrition and other stresses at the end of a long World War I. Quoting scientific studies, he said these factors "caused the virus to be more than usually virulent, and favored the occurrence of secondary bacterial pneumonia."

To back up his theory that a modern epidemic of such virulence is unlikely, Pauling points to the influenza outbreak at Ft. Dix, N.J., which spurred the new fear that swine flu might be devastating.

"In February, 1976, there was an outbreak of influenza in a large military establishment (Ft. Dix). One young serviceman, exhausted by his participation in strenuous exercises, died of pneumonia. Typing of the virus showed that about 500 of the 12,000 persons in the camp had been infected by a swine-influenza virus, given the name A-NJ-76, whereas some others had been infected by another virus, A-Victoria-75, which was then sweeping over the U.S. and Europe.

"Although the virus A-NJ-76 seemed to have died out after infecting only 4 per cent of the people in the camp, the resemblance of the virus to that of the 1918-19 pandemic, and the death by pneumonia of one person after a strenuous nighttime military exercise caused fears that another swine-flu epidemic might occur." When the government stepped in with a mass, multimillion dollar inoculation program, Dr. Pauling clearly implies, it may have been bureaucratic overreaction.

Linus Pauling feels today as he felt six years ago: that a high intake of ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) can prevent the common cold. And he now has test studies which show that it can also protect against influenza. "It is my opinion," he says firmly, "that if ascorbic acid is used in the right way we shall be able to avert epidemics and pandemics of influenza."

He's written a new book, "Vitamin C and the Common Cold and the Flu," which is considerably more broad than his first best seller about the vitamin which captured the public in 1970. Some doctors at that time disputed his theory that C was not only a preventive but a cure for colds - which afflict the average person three times every year. One particular skeptic referred to a study of college students who were given 200 milligrams of C every day, and reported no major difference in frequency or duration of colds from students who were given a placebo daily.

Dr. Pauling, in his new treatise, points out that 200 mgs. of C a day is not sufficient. In great detail, and pointing to numerous studies that back up his theories, Pauling says that "the dose taken regularly to preserve good health and provide protection against disease almost certainly should be more than 200 mgs. per day for most people. Other considerations lead me to suggest the range of 250 to 4,000 mgs. or even 10,000 mg. for recommended daily intake for most people.

"Such an intake should decrease the chance of contracting the cold or influenza and, in case the viral infection is contracted, should prevent a secondary bacterial infection from developing."

In addition to prophylactic doses of vitamin C, Dr. Pauling suggests that the ultimate goal of preventive medicine should involve a new social attitude among the peoples of the world.

"A person with a cold or the flu should feel he should isolate himself, in order not to spread the virus to others. Social pressure should operate on him... We have recently experienced a change in feeling about the 'right' of cigarette smokers to pollute the atmosphere and distress non-smokers. A similar change in feeling about the 'right' of a person to spread his viruses and infect others, so long as he himself is able to stagger about, would benefit the world!"

Profile Of Congress Shows Age Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A typical member of the House of Representatives in the next Congress will be five years younger than his Senate counterpart, slightly less educated, somewhat less certain to be a white male, and more than twice as likely to be a Catholic.

These are findings from an Associated Press survey of demographics of House and Senate members who are to take their seats next month.

The study also shows that new members are somewhat less likely to be lawyers than are returning senators and representatives. But as a group, attorneys still dominate the law-making bodies.

Here is a rundown on characteristics of the next Congress:

—AGE: House members average 49 years, senators 54. But about half the 67 new House members are under 40 and four are under 30. Despite an apparent infusion of youth, the average age of 49 is the same as when the 94th Congress began two years ago. Three new senators are under 40, but one, S.I. Hayakawa of California, is 70.

Only four of the 535 members of the House or Senate were born before 1900.

—EXPERIENCE: Members who have served two terms or less will constitute a narrow majority in the House, where the seniority system of picking committee chairmen took a beating two years ago. Only 36 of the 435 members have served more than 10 terms. In the Senate, 18 of the 100 members are new and 30 others have served all or part of only one six-year term.

—RACE: Five per cent of the House and 4 per cent of the Senate is composed of racial or ethnic minorities. In the House, that includes 16 blacks, four Spanish-surnamed members and two of Oriental descent. In the Senate, there is one black and three of Oriental descent, including two newly elected members.

—SEX: There are no women in the Senate, 17 in the House.

—EDUCATION: In the Senate, 79 per cent of the members have advanced degrees and just 3 per cent have less than a college degree. In the House, 64 per cent hold a post-graduate degree, while 9 per cent have less than a college diploma.

—RELIGION: Of those whose affiliation is known, 72 per cent in the Senate and 64 per cent in the House are Protestants. Catholics make up 27 per cent of the House and 12 per cent of the Senate.

—FAMILY: Eighty-six per cent of House members and 98 per cent of senators are married. The number of children per member averages just under three.

—OCCUPATION: Forty-nine per cent of the House and 65 per cent of the Senate were lawyers. But the November elections showed a slight trend away from lawyers in the election of new members.

In the Senate, 56 of the 82 returning senators, or 68 per cent, are lawyers. But of the 17 newly elected senators, only eight are lawyers. The 18th new senator, Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, who will be appointed to fill a vacancy, also is a lawyer.

In the House, just under 50 per cent of the 378 returning members are lawyers. But among the 67 newcomers, the percentage of lawyers drops to 42. Among House members elected two years ago, 45 per cent were lawyers, which at that time was eight points below the proportion of then-incumbent members who were lawyers.

The 7-inch standard pencil can draw a line 35 miles long, says National Geographic.

"Damage is $400 — that's $200 for the trunk, and $200 for the groceries."

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I've often wondered why it is necessary for a patient to go into a hospital several days before an operation is scheduled. I came in on a Friday and it seemed that nothing was done for me until the weekend was over.

Mr. J. F., Ohio

Dear Mr. F.: The first reaction of many patients is that it is a waste of time and money to be hospitalized a few days before an elective (non-emergency) operation.

Let me assure you that these extra days are exceedingly valuable and usually make for safer surgery and a shorter convalescence. The study of the blood, including the chemistry, blood typing and blood groupings, X-rays of the chest and electrocardiograms are just a few of the tests necessary to prevent the complications of surgery and to alert the surgeon to the needs for special safeguards.

These preliminary tests, the regulation of diet, the cleansing of the intestinal tract and the preoperative use of antibiotics are all essential and insure more rapid recovery.

Evaluation of the special needs of the patient by the anesthesiologist permits him to lay out a program of choice of the ideal anesthesia. Monitoring the blood pressure during the preoperative period is most important for the greater safety of anesthesia.

There are also many psychological advantages to being hospitalized a few days before surgery. Physical and emotional rest and the opportunity to thoroughly understand every phase of the surgery and the recovery period adds immeasurably to the patient's sense of security.

You can be sure that during the period of the "lost weekend" much information was gathered that was advantageous to you.

I bought some over-the-counter drops to soften wax in my ears. After using them twice, my ears blew up to half the size of my head. Aren't these too dangerous to be sold?

Mr. S. I. M., Fla.

Dear Mr. M.:

These drops cannot be considered dangerous. In some cases, doctors have noted allergic or hypersensitive reactions to the chemicals used to soften wax.

A much safer way to soften wax would be to use a few drops of half-strength peroxide. Sometimes a simple oil, used warm but not hot, will be just as effective.

People who have a tendency to accumulate wax should have it removed expertly, by the doctor, at regular intervals. Six months is about average, if the wax is to be kept from becoming impacted and irritating the delicate skin of the outer ear canal.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will Americans be watching Monday night football on Red Chinese television sets a few years from now?

That's one of the intriguing questions raised by Barry Richman, professor of management and international business at the Graduate School of Management of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Richman, an expert on the economy of the People's Republic of China, thinks trade between the United States and China will increase dramatically in the next few years, with color television sets, transistor radios and other consumer electronics among the possible items being imported by this country.

"You may well see color television sets from China within the next five years," Richman said in an interview. "They're producing them now, but they're talking about producing them for mass markets. If they did, they could undersell the Japanese. In fact, I think you'll see some of the same imports here that you saw after World War II from Japan and Korea."

Richman, who has traveled widely in mainland China, says the recent purge of the so-called "radical" Chinese leaders after the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung may lead to more rapid industrial growth for China under its new rulers.

"It remains to be seen whether Chairman Hua Kuo-feng — Mao's successor — will abandon substantially the traditional model of self-reliance in favor of a rapid, long-term infusion of foreign capital and technology to meet the pressing economic requirements of modernization," he said.

"But if the moderates can maintain control for the next 10 to 15 years, China would be in a position to achieve a real economic growth rate in the range of 5 to 8 per cent a year."

Richman says this could boost Sino-American trade to the $3 billion to $6 billion level, a whopping increase from the $1 billion figure of recent years.

Some of the products likely to be exported from the U.S., in Richman's view, are chemical plants, agricultural machinery, computers and heavy transportation equipment.

In turn, the Chinese are likely to sell Americans gourmet foods, textiles, sporting goods, musical instruments and minerals, he believes.

China has paid much more for imports in recent years than it has gained on exports and suffers from a balance of payments deficit. However, Richman thinks the vast Chinese oil reserves could reverse that trend.

"China may well have more oil in the ground, and especially offshore, than all of Saudi Arabia," he said. "Exactly how much is there, we don't know."

"But we do know the quantity is very great, and China also has much potential to develop and utilize other sources of energy. So it is highly possible that the export of oil in exchange for technological goods and expertise could turn China's recent balance of payments deficit into a surplus."

Cold Winter Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the nation is in for the coldest winter in recent years, the U.S. Weather Service says.

The service, updating its long-range forecast for winter, said Monday that northern air currents will carry cold arctic air further south into the nation's eastern half this winter.

The Southwest, the Ohio Valley, the southern Great Plains as far west as New Mexico and the Middle Atlantic as far north as New York all will experience colder temperatures than normal, the service said.

But temperatures above normal were forecast for the Dakotas and Wyoming to the Pacific Coast all the way south to Mexico.

"If winter temperatures follow the pattern described, they will have broken away from the pattern of the last five years — that is mild in the East or mild throughout the nation — and return to a pattern that was common in the 1960s," the forecast said.

In 1913, devastating floods throughout Ohio took 430 lives and caused property damage estimated at $250 million. Dayton, where the floods hit the hardest, suffered 361 fatalities with damages amounting to $100 million. — AP

Now that the dust has settled over the 1976 presidential election, how did the new federal campaign financing arrangement work out? The answer to that question depends in large part upon who is asked.

Minor party candidates — and there were a flock of them this year — are not pleased at all. They were totally excluded from any public financing unless they were able to obtain at least 5 per cent of the national vote, and even then they could apply for public funding only retroactively. The highest vote any of the independents received was about 1 per cent nationally, far short of the required number.

As for the two major party contenders, the funding procedure went relatively smoothly as far as it went. But there are critics in both major parties who say the amount allocated for this year's contest — only a fraction of the total spent in 1972 — was not enough, and the limit might well be higher in 1980.

As it was, the fund created by the $1 tax checkoff on individual tax returns over the last several years ended the campaign with about $23 million on hand. More than $72 million was spent from these funds, about one-third of it to the primary campaign contenders and the other two-thirds to cover the costs of the two major party national conventions and the general election.

Assuming the tax checkoff continues to accumulate at a rate of $30 million a year, the kitty for the 1980 election could be over $150 million. That prospect already is creating a renewed effort by some members of Congress to include their campaign financing under public funding.

On Pins And Needles

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — I have not yet taken my swine flu vaccination. There are a couple of reasons for this — neither of which involve the popular fear, aroused by an abominable series of coincidences, that the vaccine could be more dangerous than the disease.

My reasons for withholding my arm from the injector are these: 1 - the vaccine didn't become available for under-elderlies until a few days ago in our town, and 2 - a public health official told me last July that if Americans didn't get their vaccinations before mid-November, it might be too late. The potential flu season would already have advanced too far for the immunology to take effect.

I'm sure public health would retract that time estimate now, in the hope of seeing through its massive $135-million effort to stave off a possible pandemic such as the one in 1918-19 which killed millions. I can hear a small medicobureaucratic voice saying "It's never too late to avert disaster - disregard previous warnings."

So undoubtedly this week I shall give in to the better safe than sorry ethic, even though Dr. Linus Pauling, the famous and sometimes controversial author of "Vitamin C and the Common Cold," tells me it is not necessary. According to Dr. Pauling: "It now seems quite unlikely that there will be a swine-flu epidemic; and there is little justification for recommending mass vaccination."

He speculates that the high mortality of the swine flu pandemic of 1918 might have resulted from the malnutrition and other stresses at the end of a long World War I. Quoting scientific studies, he said these factors "caused the virus to be more than usually virulent, and favored the occurrence of secondary bacterial pneumonia."

To back up his theory that a modern epidemic of such virulence is unlikely, Pauling points to the influenza outbreak at Ft. Dix, N.J., which spurred the new fear that swine flu might be devastating.

"In February, 1976, there was an outbreak of influenza in a large military establishment (Ft. Dix). One young serviceman, exhausted by his participation in strenuous exercises, died of pneumonia. Typing of the virus showed that about 500 of the 12,000 persons in the camp had been infected by a swine-influenza virus, given the name A-NJ-76, whereas some others had been infected by another virus, A-Victoria-75, which was then sweeping over the U.S. and Europe."

"Although the virus A-NJ-76 seemed to have died out after infecting only 4 per cent of the people in the camp, the resemblance of the virus to that of the 1918-19 pandemic, and the death by pneumonia of one person after a strenuous nighttime military exercise caused fears that another swine-flu epidemic might occur." When the government stepped in with a mass, multimillion dollar inoculation program, Dr. Pauling clearly implies, it may have been bureaucratic overreaction.

Linus Pauling feels today as he felt six years ago: that a high intake of ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) can prevent the common cold. And he now has test studies which show that it can also protect against influenza. "It is my opinion," he says firmly, "that if ascorbic acid is used in the right way we shall be able to avert epidemics and pandemics of influenza."

He's written a new book, "Vitamin C and the Common Cold and the Flu," which is considerably more broad than his first best seller about the vitamin which captured the public in 1970. Some doctors at that time disputed his theory that C was not only a preventive but a cure for colds - which afflict the average person three times every year. One particular skeptic referred to a study of college students who were given 200 milligrams of C every day, and reported no major difference in frequency or duration of colds from students who were given a placebo daily.

Dr. Pauling, in his new treatise, points out that 200 mgs. of C a day is not sufficient. In great detail, and pointing to numerous studies that back up his theories, Pauling says that "the dose taken regularly to preserve good health and provide protection against disease almost certainly should be more than 200 mgs. per day for most people. Other considerations lead me to suggest the range of 250 to 4,000 mgs. or even 10,000 mg. for recommended daily intake for most people."

"Such an intake should decrease the chance of contracting the cold or influenza and, in case the viral infection is contracted, should prevent a secondary bacterial infection from developing."

In addition to prophylactic doses of vitamin C, Dr. Pauling suggests that the ultimate goal of preventive medicine should involve a new social attitude among the peoples of the world.

"A person with a cold or the flu should feel he should isolate himself, in order not to spread the virus to others. Social pressure should operate on him... We have recently experienced a change in feeling about the 'right' of cigarette smokers to pollute the atmosphere and distress non-smokers. A similar change in feeling about the 'right' of a person to spread his viruses and infect others, so long as he himself is able to stagger about, would benefit the world!"

Profile Of Congress Shows Age Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A typical member of the House of Representatives in the next Congress will be five years younger than his Senate counterpart, slightly less educated, somewhat less certain to be a white male, and more than twice as likely to be a Catholic.

These are findings from an Associated Press survey of demographics of House and Senate members who are to take their seats next month.

The study also shows that new members are somewhat less likely to be lawyers than are returning senators and representatives. But as a group, attorneys still dominate the law-making bodies.

Here is a rundown on characteristics of the next Congress:

—AGE: House members average 49 years, senators 54. But about half the 67 new House members are under 40 and four are under 30. Despite an apparent infusion of youth, the average age of 49 is the same as when the 94th Congress began two years ago. Three new senators are under 40, but one, S.I. Hayakawa of California, is 70.

Only four of the 535 members of the House or Senate were born before 1900.

—EXPERIENCE: Members who have served two terms or less will constitute a narrow majority in the House, where the seniority system of picking committee chairmen took a beating two years ago. Only 36 of the 435 members have served more than 10 terms. In the Senate, 18 of the 100 members are new and 30 others have served all or part of only one six-year term.

—RACE: Five per cent of the House and 4 per cent of the Senate is composed of racial or ethnic minorities. In the House, that includes 16 blacks, four Spanish-surnamed members and two of Oriental descent. In the Senate, there is one black and three of Oriental descent, including two newly elected members.

—SEX: There are no women in the Senate, 17 in the House.

—EDUCATION: In the Senate, 79 per cent of the members have advanced degrees and just 3 per cent have less than a college degree. In the House, 64 per cent hold a post-graduate degree, while 9 per cent have less than a college diploma.

—RELIGION: Of those whose affiliation is known, 72 per cent in the Senate and 64 per cent in the House are Protestants. Catholics make up 27 per cent of the House and 12 per cent of the Senate.

—FAMILY: Eighty-six per cent of House members and 98 per cent of senators are married. The number of children per member averages just under three.

—OCCUPATION: Forty-nine per cent of the House and 65 per cent of the Senate were lawyers. But the November elections showed a slight trend away from lawyers in the election of new members.

In the Senate, 56 of the 82 returning senators, or 68 per cent, are lawyers. But of the 17 newly elected senators, only eight are lawyers. The 18th new senator, Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, who will be appointed to fill a vacancy, also is a lawyer.

In the House, just under 50 per cent of the 378 returning members are lawyers. But among the 67 newcomers, the percentage of lawyers drops to 42. Among House members elected two years ago, 45 per cent were lawyers, which at that time was eight points below the proportion of then-incumbent members who were lawyers.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I've often wondered why it is necessary for a patient to go into a hospital several days before an operation is scheduled. I came in on a Friday and it seemed that nothing was done for me until the weekend was over.

Dear Mr. F.:

The first reaction of many patients is that it is a waste of time and money to be hospitalized a few days before an elective (non-emergency) operation.

anesthesia.

There are also many psychological advantages to being hospitalized a few days before surgery. Physical and emotional rest and the opportunity to thoroughly understand every phase of the surgery and the recovery period adds immeasurably to the patient's sense of security.

You can be sure that during the period of the "lost weekend" much information was gathered that was advantageous to you.

Let me assure you that these extra days are exceedingly valuable and usually make for safer surgery and a shorter convalescence. The study of the blood, including the chemistry, blood typing and blood groupings, X-rays of the chest and electrocardiograms are just a few of the tests necessary to prevent the complications of surgery and to alert the surgeon to the needs for special safeguards.

I bought some over-the-counter drops to soften wax in my ears. After using them twice, my ears blew up to half the size of my head. Aren't these too dangerous to be sold?

Mr. S.I.M., Fla.

Dear Mr. M.:

These drops cannot be considered dangerous. In some cases, doctors have noted allergic or hypersensitive reactions to the chemicals used to soften wax.

These preliminary tests, the regulation of diet, the cleansing of the intestinal tract and the preoperative use of antibiotics are all essential and insure more rapid recovery.

Evaluation of the special needs of the patient by the anesthesiologist permits him to lay out a program of choice of the ideal anesthesia. Monitoring the blood pressure during the preoperative period is most important for the greater safety of

A much safer way to soften wax would be to use a few drops of half-strength peroxide. Sometimes a simple oil, used warm but not hot, will be just as effective.

People who have a tendency to accumulate wax should have it removed expertly, by the doctor, at regular intervals. Six months is about average, if the wax is to be kept from becoming impacted and irritating the delicate skin of the outer ear canal.

Santa and the Giant Fighter

By Lucrece Beale

Synopsis: A certain small boy talks of nothing but fighting giants. Sent to bed without supper he is awakened by a tapping at his closet door.

CHAPTER TWO

OFF TO SANTA LAND

William Henry Christopher Preserve threw open the closet door. He waved his wooden sword and called fiercely: "Come out, giant! I'm not afraid of you!"

Instead of a giant, out came a creature small as a baby's fist. He was round and fat and he walked with a bounce like a rubber ball.

"I'm not a giant," snapped the creature bouncing up on the boy's foot. "I'm an elfite."

"W-what is an elfite?" stammered William Henry Christopher.

"An elfite is a very small elf, silly. If you paid attention in school and studied your lessons you might learn such things."

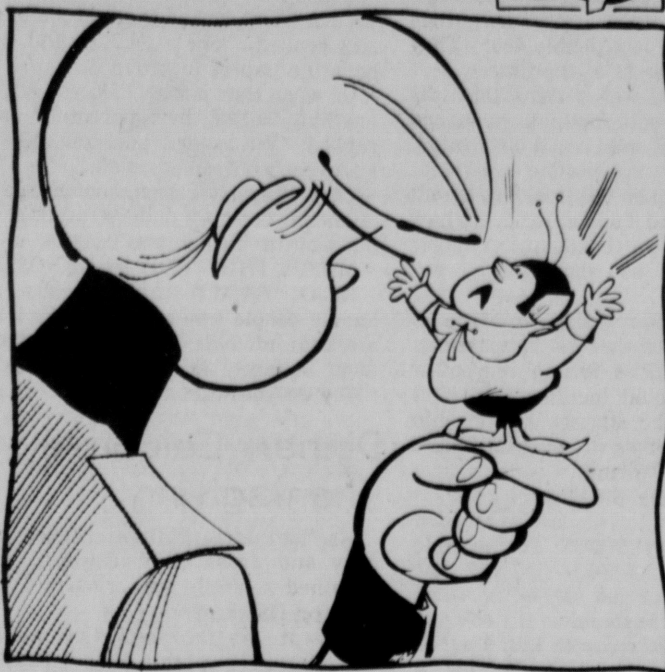

"I don't like school," said the boy. "I'm a giant fighter."

"Well," said the elfite, "I know the biggest, meanest giant in the whole world and unless someone kills that giant he is going to destroy us all."

The boy's eyes grew big and round. "W-who is he?" he quavered.

"He is called Goko. Five days ago he captured the Fairy Queen. He means to marry her on Christmas Day. Then he will own her magic and be King of all Fairyland and she, poor creature, will be his prisoner forever. And that isn't all. Already he has captured the moon!"

"The moon!" gasped the boy. "You have noticed there has been no moon in the sky for the past three nights? Goko snatched it and hid it away. He means to take down the sun and stars, too. He doesn't like things higher than he, you see. And when Santa and his reindeer fly on Christmas eve Goko has vowed to bring them down, too. And that, my boy, will be the end!"

"Goko has already captured the moon!" cried the elfite.

"But, why doesn't Santa do something?"

"He has tried. He turned himself into a mouse and visited the Fairy Queen. He hoped to gnaw away her ropes and then himself destroy the giant. But the Queen said it would take more than fairy magic to save them."

"What then? What would it take?"

"The Queen said if there were a real live boy on earth who believed in giants and fairies and such then he might save them."

"I-I believe in giants!" cried William Henry Christopher.

"I know," said the elfite. "That is why I have come to you."

"Do-do you think I could slay Goko?"

"What do you think?" asked the elfite.

The boy sighed. What if he tried and failed? What would happen to Santa and the Fairy Queen and the moon and everything then? Giant killing was an AWFUL responsibility.

But where else would the elfite find a boy who even believed in giants? He himself was the only one he knew of. So it was up to him.

"I can do it," he said, trying to keep his voice steady.

He put on his wraps, stuck his sword in his belt and climbed half way out the window. The elfite bounced up beside him and said gravely, "From now on you'll be known as Billy the Giant Fighter!"

"Billy the Giant Fighter," the boy whispered to himself. It had a strong and sturdy sound. He began to feel braver.

He dropped out of the window and the elfite bounced down beside him.

"Where to?" asked Billy as they started away.

"To Santa Land," said the elfite. "Santa will show you the way."

AT BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY

With Thanksgiving behind us, everyone seems to be gearing up for Christmas, and the public library is no exception. Children of all ages will find a variety of Yuletide stories scattered throughout our collection. In the Children's Room, most Christmas books have a red mark at the base of their spines so that busy browsers can find them in a hurry.

Christmas reminds one of New Year's, and that's just what another picture book, "The Rat, the Ox, and the Zodiac", deals with. After the Emperor's demigod has selected twelve animals for the Chinese calendar, he must decide whether to being the year with reason (the Rat) or might (the Ox). How he makes his choice is the framework for this entertaining story. Nice illustrations! (398.2)

Good for any time of the year is "Arthur's Pen Pal", our newest easy-reader. Arthur the monkey develops respect for his little sister when he discovers that his karate-kicking pen pal is actually a female.

Students in grades 4 and up won't want to miss "Operation Peeg". Jarred loose by an explosion, an island occupied by a young girl and her two companions float out to sea under the command of two British soldiers who believe that World War II is still in progress. This leads to a series of extraordinary adventures!

Alfred Hitchcock devotees will want to catch "The Mystery of the Dancing Devil", a brand new addition to the William Arden series.

Looking for nonfiction? You can start with "Looking at Horses" by June Behrens. This illustrated history of horses in art from the works of cave men to twentieth-century painters is a good introduction to art in general. Simple text.

Future geologists will find "When You Find a Rock" a helpful reference source. This book introduces rocks most commonly found in North America, explaining what they are, how they are formed, and how to identify them.

Sports fans should note the addition of three new titles in the Creative Education Sports Superstars series. These three new bibliographies are on Julius Erving, Richard Petty, and John Havlicek.

Take a break from your Christmas preparations and stop in to visit us soon!

AT BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY

With Thanksgiving behind us, everyone seems to be gearing up for Christmas, and the public library is no exception. Children of all ages will find a variety of Yuletide stories scattered throughout our collection. In the Children's Room, most Christmas books have a red mark at the base of their spines so that busy browsers can find them in a hurry.

Christmas reminds one of New Year's, and that's just what another picture book, "The Rat, the Ox, and the Zodiac", deals with. After the Emperor's demigod has selected twelve animals for the Chinese calendar, he must decide whether to bring the year with reason (the Rat) or might (the Ox). How he makes his choice is the framework for this entertaining story. Nice illustrations! (398.2)

Good for any time of the year is "Arthur's Pen Pal", our newest easy-reader. Arthur the monkey develops respect for his little sister when he discovers that his karate-kicking pen pal is actually a female.

Students in grades 4 and up won't want to miss "Operation Peeg". Jarred loose by an explosion, an island occupied by a young girl and her two companions float out to sea under the command of two British soldiers who believe that World War II is still in progress. This leads to a series of extraordinary adventures!

Alfred Hitchcock devotees will want to catch "The Mystery of the Dancing Devil", a brand new addition to the William arden series.

Looking for nonfiction? You can start with "Looking at Horses" by June Behrens. This illustrated history of horses in art from the works of cave men to twentieth-century painters is a good introduction to art in general. Simple text.

Future geologists will find "When You Find a Rock" a helpful reference source. This book introduces rocks most commonly found in North America, explaining what they are, how they are formed, and how to identify them.

Sports fans should note the addition of three new titles in the Creative Education Sports Superstars series. These three new bibliographies are on Julius Erving, Richard Petty, and John Havlicek.

Take a break from your Christmas preparations and stop in to visit us soon!

MR. AND MRS. MARK E. DAVEY

The Rev. Richard McDowell united in marriage Miss Kimberly Long and Mr. Mark E. Davey. Kimberly is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Long of Route 1, New Holland, and Mark is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ned S. Davey of Springfield.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents on Friday, November 5, at 6:30 p.m. Two seven branch candelabra entwined with ivy formed the setting.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother and father, selected for her wedding day a long white gown of qiana, featuring a fitted bodice with high neckline with lace appliques and long tapered sleeves. The skirt fell in soft folds and swirled into a long train at the back. Her veil of illusion edged in alencon lace was held in place by a beaded mantilla cap. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of carnations, daisies and roses. Her jewelry was a diamond pendant and earrings, a gift from the groom.

Mrs. Scott Riddle was matron of honor for her sister. Her long gown was of bittersweet questa nylon and featured a fitted bodice with mandarin neckline and long tapered sleeves. She wore a cameo necklace, a gift from the bride. Her colonial bouquet was of bronze and gold daisies and carnations.

Performing the duties of best man was Mr. John Scott Riddle, a friend of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of beige knit with a corsage of carnations. The mother of the groom wore a street length jacket dress of coral knit with a corsage of carnations.

Serving as hostesses were Mrs. Roger Konkle, friend of the bride and Miss Marsha Davey, sister of the bridegroom.

Honored guests were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Long and Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Ater, grandparents of the bride, Mrs. Boyd Skinner, grandmother of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. William Skinner, uncle and aunt of the groom.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Suspects In-Law's Brotherly Love

DEAR ABBY: Before my husband and I were married, he and his sister not only shared an apartment, they slept together in a double bed! (They were both over 21 at the time.)

I told him I didn't think this was normal. He said nothing happened between them, and I had a dirty mind. Even today, every time they meet she kisses him on the lips. She is still unmarried, and if anyone asks her how come, she says, "Because I've never met anybody as wonderful as my brother!"

Abby, I think my sister-in-law is in love with her brother. Is that possible, or am I jealous for no reason? I suppose I should mention that if it weren't for the strange relationship between these two, my husband would be a perfect husband.

What are your thoughts on this?

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's possible that your sister-in-law is "in love" with her brother, but you say he is otherwise a perfect husband so it's obvious that he isn't in love with her. I agree that it was highly irregular for a brother and sister of their ages to be sleeping together, but it IS possible that nothing happened. Forget it.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 20-year-old girl and very nice-looking, or so people tell me, but I've got to be the loneliest girl in Toronto, Canada!

I'm rather shy, and I'm not the type to sit in a bar and make eyes at a stranger. I go to dances with my girlfriends on the weekend, but I always wind up going home with the girls I came with.

The men stare, but they never ask me to dance. Why is it that men don't ask nice-looking girls to dance, Abby? Are they afraid we may think they aren't good enough for us?

I'm sure other girls wonder about this, too. Can you help us?

PRETTY BUT LONELY

DEAR PRETTY: Being pretty has never been a disadvantage, so there must be another reason. How's your attitude? Do you act superior? Or disinterested? If a girl (whether she's pretty or plain) will meet a fellow halfway, she's got it made.

DEAR ABBY: The problem of "adoptive parents" in your column recently was one we faced many years ago.

When we brought home a beautiful little baby girl, many of our friends and neighbors were inquisitive and wanted to know the details. On the advice of our pediatrician, we stood our ground and told them nothing.

When they asked, "Where did you get her?" we looked them in the eyes and replied, "She's OURS. And we have the papers to prove it."

Or when they asked, "Do you know anything about her parents?" we replied, "We are her parents, and we know each other very well."

They may have been momentarily offended, but they understood that to question us further was useless.

MUM'S THE WORD IN KENOSHA
DEAR MUM'S: Another way to handle people who ask questions that are none of their business is to look them squarely in the eye and ask, "Why do you want to know?"

Our village may be small in size but it is truly big when it comes to being in the hub of what is going on and this coming weekend is but a small example. Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be Secret Santa shopping days, sponsored by the local Jaycees. The shop will be located in the Jaycees building which can be reached by the alley next to either Oesterle's Market or Oesterle's Annex. Shopping hours will be during the evening only on Friday and Sunday and will be from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturday. Purchases will be gift wrapped and tagged if so desired. A large variety of merchandise will be available from which to make selection. The price range of 50 cents to $5, makes the shop attractive to all shoppers.

Harried and hurried with holiday scurrying? Up a tree on what to prepare for an evening meal? Well, Saturday evening's dinner can be neatly taken care of by coming to the smorgasbord at the Williamsport United Methodist Church annex. Serving will be from 5 p.m. through 8 p.m. and the "all you can eat" dinner will feature fried chicken, turkey and ham plus all the delicious foods that make each of the featured items taste that much better. This includes dessert and beverage. Where else could you get such a fantastic bargain at moderate prices?

Proceeds from the dinner will be used as donation to our Community Square. Is there anything more soul satisfying than having a good meal and helping a worthy cause for one sum?

While doing your Christmas shopping be sure to keep in mind a share of the square, the Williamsport history booklet and the festival cookbook. Either one or all three would make excellent gifts. Shares of the Square can be purchased from committee members Marcia Horch, Jerry Wilt, Shirley Bowser, Glenn Whitten and Charlie Galloway. The very interesting history booklets prepared by Sorosis members are available by contacting Bernice Hulse. A few Deercreek Dam Days Festival Cookbooks are still for sale and are here at my home. All three would cost less than fifteen dollars and would give to the recipient a part in the past, present and future of Williamsport.

Tony Alan Picklesimer, weighing in at 6 lbs., 11 oz., arrived at Fayette Memorial Hospital at Washington C. H. on Nov. 21. Parents are J. F. and Vicki Skaggs Picklesimer and little brother Jason celebrated a second birthday on Oct. 24. Tony adds joy and happiness to a family tree of an almost incredible heritage. He joins his brother as a part of the fifth generation that includes an other fifth generation branch. After the boys and daddy J.F. we have grandmother Rosie (Mrs. J. J.) Brady, great grandmother Betty (Mrs. Floyd) Cox, and great great grandmother Sylvia Wilkey. Tony Alan's maternal grandparents are Lovell and Betty Skaggs of Clarks Lake.

Cotton and Helen Timmons were in a holiday whirl all week. On Sunday before Turkey Day they entertained family members Roy "Tuck" and Judy Morgan, Michele and Jeff of Pickerington, Bob and Mildred Morgan and Ned of Five Points, Dick and Helen Morgan, Paul and Norma Morgan of Columbus, Bruce Morgan and a friend from Ohio State, Nancy Morgan who teaches in Columbus and one of her friends and Rita Ingman, the much loved Westfall Middle School band instructor. On Thanksgiving Day Cotton and Helen were guests of Dr. Jack and Janet Timmons at their Canal Winchester home. On Friday they were dinner guests of Cotton's niece Helen Rockwell of Dayton and enjoyed being with several relatives who were here for the holiday from Missouri.

Pete and Pearl Cochenour were among the holiday dinner guests at the home of Jack and Patti Brayshaw. Later in the day the Cochenours enjoyed having Bill and Valli Long and children from Daartown stop by. The Longs had been a part of the Homer Longs traditional family day.

Bob and Pat Metzger and pretty daughters Crystal and Lori had the pleasure of the company of family on Thanksgiving. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Jones of Frankfort, Mrs. Sara Moore, Scott and Jodi James of Dayton, Sam Metzger of Columbus, Keith and Sheila James and little Robert of South Carolina. Keith is in the Marine Corps.

Janet and Wayne Wright hosted the family Thanksgiving gathering and having a very pleasant day were Warren and Norma Wright, Don and Ruth Schleich, Kathy and Laura, Jeff and Susan Wright Davis, Clark and Debbie Schleich McFarland, Toni and C.K., all from our area, Bill and Cindy Schleich Kiser from Circleville. Also enjoying the fellowship and hospitality were Big John and John Aleen Graffis from our town.

Bill and Marcia Horch and images Sheryl and Kenneth were unable to fly out east as hoped due to poor visibility so they did the next best thing — they drove out. It was the 40th anniversary of Marcia's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spence of Arlington, Massachusetts, however, the celebration was held at the home of a sister Pauline Widmer, Manchester Connecticut.

"Red" and Frances Fry and Rose Horch enjoyed having Thanksgiving Day dinner at the Buccaneer in Lancaster. Then on Saturday they were the guests of their niece and her husband Cliff and "Boots" Ford at Canton.

Trying the bachelor lifestyle for a while is Earl Anderson since his sidekick Justine took her very first plane trip and went to Nova Scotia to be with their daughter Cinda, her husband Larry Justice and their sons.

Trudeau's Wife With Sophia Loren

MONTREAL (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's wife, Margaret, spent an afternoon with Sophia Loren while the Italian actress was at work on "Angela." Miss Loren plays a waitress in the film, set in 1953 and directed by Boris Sagal.

A Paramount Pictures spokesman said Mrs. Trudeau took still pictures Wednesday during location filming at a restaurant in Old Montreal.

The prime minister's wife and the actress "jointly signed autographs for at least two dozen people" at the fast-food restaurant which usually closes in mid-afternoon, the spokesman said.

The two women met during a private luncheon at the Italian Embassy in Ottawa on Nov. 21, and Miss Loren invited Mrs. Trudeau to Montreal to watch filming for a day.

"Hors d'oeuvres" literally means outside the main design of the meal. It was originally an architectural term.

Demo Leaders Ready For Clash With Rhodes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The liberal Democratic leaders of the Ohio Senate are regarded as Gov. James A. Rhodes' severest critics in the General Assembly.

Majority Leader Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron, who often refers sarcastically to the governor as "his excellency," has blocked key Rhodes programs in the legislature.

Majority Whip Harry Meshel, D-33 Youngstown, led fights against Senate confirmation of several Republican administration cabinet appointments. Meshel once called on the governor to resign and on another occasion mocked his rhetoric as "Rhodesian ramblings."

Asst. Majority Leader M. Morris Jackson, D-21, Cleveland, is not nearly as outspoken as his two colleagues, but is usually in concert with leadership policies.

"His excellency did inject himself into the races," Ocasek said of Rhodes campaign efforts for GOP legislative candidates, "and I would say that his record is not that good."

On the other hand, the election results shored up Ocasek's position as Senate Democrats maintained a veto-proof 21-12 majority. Even some Democrats thought Ocasek might lose a seat or two.

His leadership had been called in question at times during the 111th General Assembly when he failed to muster enough Democratic votes to defeat a Rhodes appointment or override a gubernatorial veto.

The articulate, 47-year-old Akron University education professor admits that the loose rein he holds on his caucus is viewed "as weakness" by some political observers. But he plans no changes in his policy of rule by consensus.

Ocasek is a textbook liberal who looks favorably on legislation aiding education, consumers and labor. Although he is tall and somewhat husky, he projects a professorial image rather than athletic, and is a former member of the National Education Association executive board.

"The people are restless and they have some social ills," Ocasek says of the current political climate. "There are many things they want done but they don't want to pay for them."

As he enters his 19th year in the Senate, Ocasek has pledged support for a public employees collective bargaining bill and more consumer legislation, including a supermarket pricing bill and a measure to restrict mechanic liens against homeowners. Previous legislation in all three areas was vetoed by Rhodes.

Meshel, though third in the Senate pecking order, has emerged as a Senate strongman with a knack for getting involved in key — and often controversial — issues.

A 51-year-old real estate broker and former Youngstown State University instructor, Meshel has automatic entry into many critical areas in his role as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. He also serves on the powerful Rules Committee and State Controlling Board.

Because the hardworking Meshel spends more time at the Statehouse than many Columbus lawmakers, there has been speculation that he is aiming toward a higher office.

Jackson, a 53-year-old personnel director for a Cleveland supermarket chain, maintains a doggedly low profile, but is sensitive to criticism. He attracts little attention with his occasional, uninspired floor speeches. Jackson is chairman of the Education and Welfare Committee which helped craft Ohio's equal yield school subsidy formula.

Deny Transport Center Liability

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Roger F. Dreyer, chair of the Ohio Transportation Research Center's board of directors, has defended it from a state auditor's report which as much as labeled the facility a white elephant.

Dreyer was asked Tuesday about the report showing the center had an operating loss over a five-year period of more than $20 million, and suggesting the legislature cut off future funding until a study is made.

The chairman said Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson's report included in the $20 million "many things we consider an investment, not an operating loss." He acknowledged the center near Marysville is not yet operating in the black, but said it had been victim of an "economic downturn" starting in 1973 and should be making a profit in the next two years.

Dreyer also said Ferguson "doesn't like the idea" that the center—a quasi-public agency similar to the Ohio Turnpike Commission—has its own audit done annually by an outside firm and submits the results to the governor and legislature in annual reports. "He just does not like outside audits," he said of Ferguson.

The board chairman pointed to a recently enacted state law that gives the board authority to operate under its own rules and regulations, instead of those spelled out for other line agencies of the state. Ferguson's report had been critical on that point.

Dreyer said if the board was forced to operate under the state's rules, the center would have to employ between 140 and 150 persons "rather than the 38 or 39 we have now." Civil Service and the "red tape" it entails would create and maintain a bureaucracy, he suggested.

The chairman took issue with consultant fees Ferguson's report included in the $20 million loss figure, especially $1.1 million that went to E.S. Preston & Associates. Dreyer said the Preston firm acted as an engineering consulting on layout and construction of the huge vehicle research and test center. He added "we haven't had a contract with Preston for a year and a half."

Ferguson's report covered the period from Nov. 12, 1971, to July 22, 1975, although the center didn't become operational until 1973, Dreyer said. He said everyone expected "we would need a five-year start up."

Additionally, Dreyer noted that the federal government already has leased part of the center for an automotive test compliance facility but has been delayed by legal challenges of some of the safety equipment the government wants to require on future motor vehicles—such as new types of bumpers and air bags.

"With all that put into the picture, I don't think we have done badly," he said.

Seminary Offers New Vocation

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mount St. Mary's Seminary has launched an advertising campaign that has proved to be a godsend for professional men seeking to do something better with their lives.

The school's most recent effort was a slick full-page ad in "Time Magazine," which asks "Tired of the 9 to 5 grind?" A brochure has also been produced which gives case histories of several men who were successful in other professions, but for their own reasons decided to become priests.

The trend toward people later in life deciding to give the ministry a try has been a shot in the arm for Mount St. Mary's, and for many other seminaries like it around the country.

It began about five years ago, at about the time the school began to notice a decline in the number of candidates coming directly from school into the ministry.

Of the current incoming freshmen class at the seminary, eight of the 32 students had some other profession a year ago. Twenty-four of the 110 students in the school fall into the same category.

Their former occupations vary widely and their ages go into the 40s. They have been teachers, business executives and army officers.

The school is so delighted with its new-found source of students, that school officials are looking for more.

Man Held In Slaying

MASON, W.Va. (AP) — A West Virginia man is being held by Ohio authorities in connection with the brutal stabbing death of Mary Berry, a supermarket owner.

John L. Young refused to sign extradition papers after his capture in nearby Pomeroy, Ohio, authorities said. He was being held in Meigs County Jail on a murder charge. Young said he wanted to file charges against arresting officers for alleged physical abuse.

Authorities believe robbery was the motive for the slaying. The house, in which the woman lived alone in this tiny Ohio River community, had been ransacked.

The body of the woman was discovered by her elderly mother Wednesday. Deputies said the victim's hands had been tied behind her back and she had been stabbed five times.

The victim owned and operated a supermarket in the community, some 20 miles north of Point Pleasant. Sheriff J.L. Gaskins said the mother became concerned when her daughter did not show up at the marked Wednesday morning.

Authorities theorized that the murder occurred sometime shortly after midnight.

An autopsy was being performed in Huntington.

Luis Tiant Sr. Hospitalized

BOSTON (AP) — Luis Tiant Sr., father of Boston Red Sox baseball pitcher Luis Tiant, is in satisfactory condition at a Boston hospital, undergoing treatment for an unspecified illness.

The ball player's lawyer, Robert Woolf, said the elder Tiant has been a patient at Carney Hospital for the past two weeks, but he declined to elaborate.

Tiant's father was a pitching star with the old New York Cubans and has been permitted, along with his wife, to live in this country by special arrangement between the U.S. State Department and Cuba.

Unanswered Questions Mark Energy Scene

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Unanswered questions about new environmental standards, rate relief for the needy and a consumer advocate office could have an impact on the cost and availability of electricity in Ohio in future years.

While those issues will be in the forefront this winter, Ohioans on the job and at home can expect a continued flow of electric power — and high utility bills.

Perhaps, the most pressing issue for the state's seven investor-owned electric utilities is a new set of federal air pollution standards which the state may adopt.

Ohio, a major producer of high sulfur coal, is the only state without formal plans for control of sulfur dioxide emissions, a major pollutant that pours out of coal-fired electric generating plants as well as chemical plants.

Enforcement of the proposed federal regulations will be an expensive proposition for the electric firms whether they install pollution-screening scrubbers at plants or import low sulfur coal.

"About 50 per cent of the coal that we now use is unacceptable," estimates Peter Susey of Ohio's Energy and Resource Development Agency.

The looming federal standards are a problem for the state's Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) which must either adopt or modify them, devise a new plan, or simply ignore the guidelines and leave enforcement to the federal government. An Ohio plan, or changes in the federal proposal, would require approval from the U.S. EPA.

Hearings on the federal plan resume in Cincinnati Dec. 16 with forums in other cities to follow. Previous state plans have been challenged by utilities and successfully overturned.

Ohio EPA Director Ned E. Williams has denied any footdragging on the part of the state to establish the regulations. But he says the proposed federal rules will be modified if the electric companies can prove they amount to overkill.

Meanwhile, rumblings are heard on the legislative front.

Rep. Thomas J. Carney, D-71 Youngstown, says the new utility ratemaking law will be reviewed with an eye toward some changes.

"We've slain the Goliath of the Reconstruction Cost New (RCN) formula and perhaps now we ought to clean up the debris," says Carney, who last year chaired a Joint Select Committee on Energy.

Carney is concerned that electric utilities will begin switching to low sulfur but high-priced coal from the West to meet air quality standards, and then pass the cost on to ratepayers.

"We've got to review the construction work in progress (CWIP) factor in the rate base and compare that to the recent Federal Power Commission decision which restricts CWIP to environmental work," he said.

Under Ohio's original cost rate plan, utilities can receive credit in their rate base — total property worth — for construction costs before a project is completed. The CWIP factor is especially beneficial for electric utilities, building coal-fired or nuclear powered generating plants.

In regulating natural gas rates, Carney says, the FPC has decided to credit a utility for on-going construction when costs involve work to meet environmental standards.

He is considering similar legislation for electric utilities to steer Ohio companies away from western coal and toward installation of scrubbers which would cleanse high sulfur Ohio coal.

Utility interests won a major victory in the general election when voters defeated issues that would have created an independent consumer office, forced companies to provide low-cost winter rates, and put strict limitations on nuclear power.

Utility officials now say they are prepared to back in 1977 an undefined plan to grant rate relief to the aged, infirmed and needy.

A "lifeline" rate — more narrowly drawn than the ballot proposal that would have applied all residential customers — is one possibility. Under "lifeline," those who qualify get minimum blocs of low-cost gas and electricity in winter months.

Another option is peak load, or time of day, pricing that offers a break to homeowners or renters who make major use of electric power in off hours, such as before 7 a.m. and after 7 p.m.

Legislation encompassing both of these concepts is expected to be introduced early next year. The position taken by utility lobbyists will be a key in determining which way the General Assembly goes.

shop in January as a bonafide representative of the rate-paying public at regulatory hearings before the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

The PUCO is a quasijudicial body that is expected to balance consumer and utility interests in determining an equitable rate of return for energy service.

The consumer counsel, named by an advisory board established by Atty.

Gen. William J. Brown, will be empowered to act as an intervenor in rate cases on the side of residential users. Utilities will be assessed for operation of the office.

One of the defeated ballot issues would have set up a nongovernment Residential Utility Consumers Action Group, funded by voluntary check-off contributions on utility bills. Opponents of Issue 5 said it would be a duplication of the consumer counsel.

Seminary Offers New Vocation

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mount St. Mary's Seminary has launched an advertising campaign that has proved to be a godsend for professional men seeking to do something better with their lives.

The school's most recent effort was a slick full-page ad in "Time Magazine," which asks "Tired of the 9 to 5 grind?" A brochure has also been produced which gives case histories of several men who were successful in other professions, but for their own reasons decided to become priests.

The trend toward people later in life deciding to give the ministry a try has been a shot in the arm for Mount St. Mary's, and for many other seminaries like it around the country.

It began about five years ago, at about the time the school began to notice a decline in the number of candidates coming directly from school into the ministry.

Of the current incoming freshmen class at the seminary, eight of the 32 students had some other profession a year ago. Twenty-four of the 110 students in the school fall into the same category.

Their former occupations vary widely and their ages go into the 40s. They have been teachers, business executives and army officers.

The school is so delighted with its new-found source of students, that school officials are looking for more.

Man Held In Slaying

MASON, W.Va. (AP) — A West Virginia man is being held by Ohio authorities in connection with the brutal stabbing death of Mary Berry, a supermarket owner.

John L. Young refused to sign extradition papers after his capture in nearby Pomeroy, Ohio, authorities said. He was being held in Meigs County Jail on a murder charge. Young said he wanted to file charges against arresting officers for alleged physical abuse.

Authorities believe robbery was the motive for the slaying. The house, in which the woman lived alone in this tiny Ohio River community, had been ransacked.

The body of the woman was discovered by her elderly mother Wednesday. Deputies said the victim's hands had been tied behind her back and she had been stabbed five times.

The victim owned and operated a supermarket in the community, some 20 miles north of Point Pleasant. Sheriff J.L. Gaskins said the mother became concerned when her daughter did not show up at the marked Wednesday morning.

Authorities theorized that the murder occurred sometime shortly after midnight.

An autopsy was being performed in Huntington.

Luis Tiant Sr. Hospitalized

BOSTON (AP) — Luis Tiant Sr., father of Boston Red Sox baseball pitcher Luis Tiant, is in satisfactory condition at a Boston hospital, undergoing treatment for an unspecified illness.

The ball player's lawyer, Robert Woolf, said the elder Tiant has been a patient at Carney Hospital for the past two weeks, but he declined to elaborate.

Tiant's father was a pitching star with the old New York Cubans and has been permitted, along with his wife, to live in this country by special arrangement between the U.S. State Department and Cuba.

Unanswered Questions Mark Energy Scene

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Unanswered questions about new environmental standards, rate relief for the needy and a consumer advocate office could have an impact on the cost and availability of electricity in Ohio in future years.

While those issues will be in the forefront this winter, Ohioans on the job and at home can expect a continued flow of electric power — and high utility bills.

Perhaps, the most pressing issue for the state's seven investor-owned electric utilities is a new set of federal air pollution standards which the state may adopt.

Ohio, a major producer of high sulfur coal, is the only state without formal plans for control of sulfur dioxide emissions, a major pollutant that pours out of coal-fired electric generating plants as well as chemical plants.

Enforcement of the proposed federal regulations will be an expensive proposition for the electric firms whether they install pollution-screening scrubbers at plants or import low sulfur coal.

"About 50 per cent of the coal that we now use is unacceptable," estimates Peter Susey of Ohio's Energy and Resource Development Agency.

The looming federal standards are a problem for the state's Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) which must either adopt or modify them, devise a new plan, or simply ignore the guidelines and leave enforcement to the federal government. An Ohio plan, or changes in the federal proposal, would require approval from the U.S. EPA.

Hearings on the federal plan resume in Cincinnati Dec. 16 with forums in other cities to follow. Previous state plans have been challenged by utilities and successfully overturned.

Ohio EPA Director Ned E. Williams has denied any footdragging on the part of the state to establish the regulations. But he says the proposed federal rules will be modified if the electric companies can prove they amount to overkill.

Meanwhile, rumblings are heard on the legislative front.

Rep. Thomas J. Carney, D-71 Youngstown, says the new utility ratemaking law will be reviewed with an eye toward some changes.

"We've slain the Goliath of the Reconstruction Cost New (RCN) formula and perhaps now we ought to clean up the debris," says Carney, who last year chaired a Joint Select Committee on Energy.

Carney is concerned that electric utilities will begin switching to low sulfur but high-priced coal from the West to meet air quality standards, and then pass the cost on to ratepayers.

"We've got to review the construction work in progress (CWIP) factor in the rate base and compare that to the recent Federal Power Commission decision which restricts CWIP to environmental work," he said.

Under Ohio's original cost rate plan, utilities can receive credit in their rate base — total property worth — for construction costs before a project is completed. The CWIP factor is especially beneficial for electric utilities, building coal-fired or nuclear powered generating plants.

In regulating natural gas rates, Carney says, the FPC has decided to credit a utility for on-going construction when costs involve work to meet environmental standards.

He is considering similar legislation for electric utilities to steer Ohio companies away from western coal and toward installation of scrubbers which would cleanse high sulfur Ohio coal.

Utility interests won a major victory in the general election when voters defeated issues that would have created an independent consumer office, forced companies to provide low-cost winter rates, and put strict limitations on nuclear power.

Utility officials now say they are prepared to back in 1977 an undefined plan to grant rate relief to the aged, infirmed and needy.

A "lifeline" rate — more narrowly drawn than the ballot proposal that would have applied all residential customers — is one possibility. Under "lifeline," those who qualify get minimum blocs of low-cost gas and electricity in winter months.

Another option is peak load, or time of day, pricing that offers a break to homeowners or renters who make major use of electric power in off hours, such as before 7 a.m. and after 7 p.m.

Legislation encompassing both of these concepts is expected to be introduced early next year. The position taken by utility lobbyists will be a key in determining which way the General Assembly goes.

Whatever the rate structure, the state consumer counsel will set up shop in January as a bonafide representative of the rate-paying public at regulatory hearings before the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

The PUCO is a quasijudicial body that is expected to balance consumer and utility interests in determining an equitable rate of return for energy service.

The consumer counsel, named by an advisory board established by Atty.

Gen. William J. Brown, will be empowered to act as an intervenor in rate cases on the side of residential users. Utilities will be assessed for operation of the office.

One of the defeated ballot issues would have set up a nongovernment Residential Utility Consumers Action Group, funded by voluntary check-off contributions on utility bills. Opponents of Issue 5 said it would be a duplication of the consumer counsel.

Men Given Probation By Judge Ammer

Two people were given suspended sentences for drug-related charges by Pickaway County Common Pleas Court Judge William Ammer.

Tony Ralph Sayre, 20, West-Ford Road, Ashville, and Ronnie Lee Haddox, 24, 433 S. Court St., Circleville, were both placed on probation for three years following the suspension of their prison terms.

Sayre, who pleaded guilty Oct. 15 to a charge of the sale of marijuana, had been sentenced to a term of from six months to five years in the Mansfield Reformatory for Men.

Haddox, who pleaded guilty Oct. 13 to a charge of trafficking in marijuana, was sentenced to from six months to five years at the Mansfield Reformatory.

Both men are required to serve 45-day jail terms in the Pickaway County Jail, must not possess or use any narcotic drugs or marijuana, and must make restitution for the purchase of the marijuana.

A jury trial has been set Jan. 18 for Charles E. Thomas, 405 Alden St., Columbus, who has been charged with breaking and entering and grand theft.

Thomas has entered a not guilty pleas.

The action was instituted by the Grand Jury on Nov. 5.

Thomas was charged Sept. 19 with breaking into the American Legion Post 134 and taking food, money, and cigarettes. He was arrested by Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies inside the Legion home.

Judge Ammer has ordered a presentence report in the case of William W. Justice, 710 Southwood Ave., Columbus, who has pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering and grand theft.

The charge was made Nov. 16 and states that he unlawfully entered Gourmet Corner and took food, drink, and cigarettes.

Justice appeared on a Bill of Information and waived grand jury indictment.

CB Sales Flourish At Record Levels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a late summer-early fall sales slump, more citizens band radios will be sold this year than in the 18 years since the general public has been permitted to use them, an industry trade group predicts.

John Sodolski, an Electronics Industries Association vice president, said 1976 sales will total nearly 10 million sets, more than double the number of CB radios sold last year.

Retail sales of radios, antennae and other accessories should top $2 billion this year, he predicted.

Sodolski said there are nearly 20 million CB sets now in use. The Federal Communications Commission said it has issued 7.5 million licenses, with the rate of applications continuing at about 300,000 a month.

Many CB enthusiasts install units in both their homes and their cars to enable home-to-mobile conversations.

The industry expects CB sales to continue to climb next year, Sodolski said, due largely to publicity since the growth of CBs began in 1973, new features and the expansion of the current 23-channel CB band to 40 channels next month.

Recent FCC figures show about 70 models containing the new 17 channels have been approved for sale on Jan. 1 when the FCC channel expansion becomes effective.

Sodolski said only three million CB sets were sold between 1958, when CB radio as it is now known was created, and 1973, when a combination of factors triggered the current boom. Sales in 1973 exceeded one million, then more than doubled each year since then.

But the FCC expansion decision and its initial confusion, combined with the usual late summer sales slump and supply finally meeting demand, brought about a halt in the rising rate of sales in September.

Nevertheless, Sodolski said, record sales in the first half of 1976 and the expected resumption of sales in November and December is expected to result in the 10-million-unit sales this year.

Sodolski said he expects a shortage of the new 40-channel sets early next year because of FCC rules that prevent shipping the new units to retailers until Jan. 1, and because of some industry difficulty in meeting new FCC standards required to lessen CB interference with television and other broadcast bands.

Nevertheless, the FCC said last week that 79 models had been approved for sale and testing of others will continue to determine whether they meet the new FCC standards and can be sold to the public.

Temperatures were expected to drop to around 10 above north and into the teens south by evening, continuing the drop Friday morning to between 10 below northwest and 10 above southeast. Northerly winds of 15 to 25 miles per hour today were adding to the discomfort.

Flurries and snow squalls and blowing and drifting snow were forecast for the northeast part of the state, especially in the snow belt. There also was a chance of flurries in the rest of the state today.

Thieves Break Into Empty Dam Shack

Thieves, who broke into the Dam Shack near Deer Creek State Park Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, netted nothing for their troubles.

The Dam Shack, located on the McCafferty-Crownover Mill Road, Route 1, Mt. Sterling, and owned by Robert Dick, is emptied of its contents every winter, according to the Pickaway County Sheriff's Department.

Thieves pried a lock from the door and broke a window, committing $22 damage.

Thieves stole citizen band radios from cars owned by Lloyd Montgomery, 7738 Mound St., Orient, and James Whitson, 8642 Fostoria Lane, Orient.

Woman Wins $750,000 Medical Suit

CINCINNATI (AP) — A blind 23-year-old Social Security Administration clerk said she expects to realize about $500,000 from the $750,000 malpractice award she won from the hospital where she was born but plans to keep on working.

"I feel shocked and surprised because I've never heard of that kind of money," said Nancy Ungar, Cincinnati.

"I'm pleased that I got that amount but I don't think it's excessive." She said about $250,000 will go for legal fees.

The award was made against Cincinnati Jewish Hospital by a Hamilton County Common Pleas Court jury.

Miss Ungar's lawyers contended during the trial that she was blinded because excessive oxygen was piped into her incubator following her Oct. 18, 1953 premature birth.

Dr. William Hunting, now retired in Naples, Fla., was the attending physician. He earlier agreed to pay $50,000 damages, she said.

Testimony indicated that Miss Ungar was born 15 minutes after her twin brother, Gary. He was not harmed. She suffered a blindness causing disease called retrolental fibroplasia resulting from the oxygen treatment, her lawyers contended.

Court officials said Ohio law permits persons claiming malpractice damages from treatment at birth can file suit anytime or until two years after turning age 21.

Pop Songwriter Freda Payne Wed

CHICAGO (AP) — Pop singer and songwriter Freda Payne and Stanford University doctoral candidate Gregory Abbott have been married in a private ceremony here.

Abbott, 30, has a 3-year-old son by a previous marriage. The marriage is the first for Miss Payne, 32, of Detroit. The two said they met at a party last December. They were engaged in June.

Friends said they plan a honeymoon in Acapulco, Mexico, and a simultaneous appearance on the Sammy Davis and Company television show, now filming there.

The marriage took place Wednesday at the home of an aunt and uncle of Miss Payne.

Man Seeks New Judge

CINCINNATI (AP) — The contention that a Detroit area man cannot get a fair trial before U.S. District Judge David S. Porter in Cincinnati has been taken under advisement by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Sterling Brown was convicted of fraudulently posing as a lawyer during arguments before the appeals court. An attorney for Brown said Wednesday his client could not receive a fair trial because U.S. District Court Judge David Porter was familiar with the other judges involved in the case.

Brown, of Royal Oak, Mich. and formerly of Hamilton, Ohio, was convicted of falsely representing himself as a lawyer on four occasions. He was sentenced to five years in prison, but was required to serve only six months and pay a $2,000 fine.

He has been free pending the outcome of his appeal.

Frank Haddad Jr., of Louisville, Ky. argued that his client had also been denied the right to call those witnesses that he wanted when Judge Porter quashed two subpoenas issued to the prosecutors in the case.

During the May 1975 trial, appeals court judge Albert Engel testified that during Brown's appearance before the court "I had no reason to believe they (his oral arguments) were made by anyone other than an attorney."

Thieves Break Into Empty Dam Shack

Thieves, who broke into the Dam Shack near Deer Creek State Park Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, netted nothing for their troubles.

The Dam Shack, located on the McAfferty-Crowner Mill Road, Route 1, Mt. Sterling, and owned by Robert Dick, is emptied of its contents every winter, according to the Pickaway County Sheriff's Department.

Thieves pried a lock from the door and broke a window, committing $22 damage.

Thieves stole citizen band radios from cars owned by Lloyd Montgomery, 7738 Mound St., Orient, and James Whitson, 8642 Fostoria Lane, Orient.

Woman Wins $750,000 Medical Suit

CINCINNATI (AP) — A blind 23-year-old Social Security Administration clerk said she expects to realize about $500,000 from the $750,000 malpractice award she won from the hospital where she was born but plans to keep on working.

"I feel shocked and surprised because I've never heard of that kind of money," said Nancy Ungar, Cincinnati.

"I'm pleased that I got that amount but I don't think it's excessive." She said about $250,000 will go for legal fees.

The award was made against Cincinnati Jewish Hospital by a Hamilton County Common Pleas Court jury.

Miss Ungar's lawyers contended during the trial that she was blinded because excessive oxygen was piped into her incubator following her Oct. 18, 1953 premature birth.

Dr. William Hunting, now retired in Naples, Fla., was the attending physician. He earlier agreed to pay $50,000 damages, she said.

Testimony indicated that Miss Ungar was born 15 minutes after her twin brother, Gary. He was not harmed. She suffered a blindness causing disease called retrolental fibroplasia resulting from the oxygen treatment, her lawyers contended.

Court officials said Ohio law permits persons claiming malpractice damages from treatment at birth can file suit anytime or until two years after turning age 21.

Pop Songwriter Freda Payne Wed

CHICAGO (AP) — Pop singer and songwriter Freda Payne and Stanford University doctoral candidate Gregory Abbott have been married in a private ceremony here.

Abbott, 30, has a 3-year-old son by a previous marriage. The marriage is the first for Miss Payne, 32, of Detroit. The two said they met at a party last December. They were engaged in June.

Friends said they plan a honeymoon in Acapulco, Mexico, and a simultaneous appearance on the Sammy Davis and Company television show, now filming there.

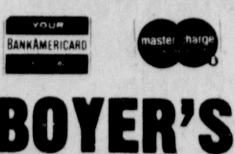

The marriage took place Wednesday at the home of an aunt and uncle of Miss Payne.

A story was told of a nun who ran out of gas, and walked to a filling station. The owner gave her enough gas to get her car started in the only container he had available, a beer bottle. She returned to the car and was pouring the contents of the beer bottle into the tank when a Protestant Evangelist drove by. He watched in amazement then exclaimed, "We may have our differences, sister, but I've got to admire your faith!"

Man Seeks New Judge

CINCINNATI (AP) — The contention that a Detroit area man cannot get a fair trial before U.S. District Judge David S. Porter in Cincinnati has been taken under advisement by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Sterling Brown was convicted of fraudulently posing as a lawyer during arguments before the appeals court.

An attorney for Brown said Wednesday his client could not receive a fair trial because U.S. District Court Judge David Porter was familiar with the other judges involved in the case.

Brown, of Royal Oak, Mich. and formerly of Hamilton, Ohio, was convicted of falsely representing himself as a lawyer on four occasions. He was sentenced to five years in prison, but was required to serve only six months and pay a $2,000 fine.

He has been free pending the outcome of his appeal.

Frank Haddad Jr., of Louisville, Ky. argued that his client had also been denied the right to call these witnesses that he wanted when Judge Porter quashed two subpoenas issued to the prosecutors in the case.

During the May 1975 trial, appeals court judge Albert Engel testified that during Brown's appearance before the court "I had no reason to believe they (his oral arguments) were made by anyone other than an attorney."

Pickaway County moves into its second full weekend of basketball action this Friday night, then all teams catch their breath Saturday night before heading into next week's action.

The Teays Valley Vikings sail to Hamilton Twp. High School for a match-up against a team that can only be described as powerful. According to Viking mentor Bob Hoover, the Rangers are a big team, with their tallest timber stretching the tape to six feet four and six feet six. These two men are a forward and center, respectively.

The hosts make use of a man to man defense, plus some 2-3 and a full court 2-2-1. It has had some measure of success, because the season record for the Rangers so far is 3-0. Victims of the Rangers have been Wherle, Pickerington, and Marysville.

Answering the opening buzzer for the Vikes Friday night will be Tim Tosca and Mike Fisher at the guards, with Terry Trego and Rick Queen at the forwards. Mike Johnson will be in the pivot. To take a victory at Hamilton Twp., Hoover said that the Vikings will have to control the tempo of the game.

Next Tuesday night the Vikings will host Grandview at the Teays Valley gym. Friday night at Hamilton Twp. the reserve game gets underway at 7 p.m., with varsity action to immediately follow.

The Westfall Mustangs are idle Friday and Saturday, but they get back into action Tuesday night when they host Unioto.

Mustangs boss Mike Eckle said that the Shermans have yet to win in two outings, but they are big, and "coming out of the SCOL, they've played against some good competition."

They'll win their share of games in the SVC."

The visitors will use their experienced personnel in a man-to-man and 2-3-2 zone defense, while on offense the Shermans use a two guard front with a stack on one side.

What do the Mustangs have to do in order to insure the win? "We have to shoot well, and eliminate our turnovers," says Eckle. "We must play generally smart basketball, and I'd like to see us improve our shot selection."

The reserves take the floor at 6:30 p.m., with the varsity contest starting approximately 8 p.m.

Friday night at the McDowell gymnasium, the Logan Elm Braves play host to the Millersport Lakers. Braves mentor Butch Kobel says that the Lakers squad is improved over last year's team. They will make use of a 1-3-1 trap, 2-3 zone, and a man-to-man defense to force turnovers on the competition. Kobel reports that they are a scrappy ball club with a great deal of hustle.

For their offensive efforts, they try the two guard front, the high post, and the give and go. According to Kobel, the Lakers have an excellent guard in Chad Dupler, and they will work the give and go with him, also clearing out on side occasionally and letting Dupler go one on one with this defender.

Going off the bench at the tip-off will be Jeff Collins and Mark Skinner at the guards, with Terry Wright and Randy Pontious at the forward spots. The man in the middle will be Chuck Cave, provided that he has shaken the illness bothering him all week. If Cave isn't ready, then the Braves will probably go with either Jerry Scanlan or Doug Woods in the lane.

Tiger Matmen Open

Circleville will open its wrestling season tonight at Teays Valley with seven returning lettermen forming the nucleus of what should be a strong squad for coach Brent Bell.

"I'm looking forward to a good wrestling year as we have a team that should improve with each match," Circleville coach Brent Bell stated.

"The returning veterans should give us a sound base to work from and the seven new starters are all very good wrestlers who will learn and improve rapidly. We have only one thing in mind and that is to build toward the South Central Ohio League championship. We may lose a few early matches but by the time the league rolls around we should have a very sound team ready to defend our title."

"I'm very pleased with the quality of our younger wrestlers and believe the competition for varsity berths will become quite intense before the season is very old," Bell commented.

All-Ohio Class AA Players Named

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Unbeaten Cincinnati Reading, stung at missing the state high school playoffs, gained some consolation Wednesday when star rusher Tom Fouchey was named The Associated Press' Ohio Class AA Back of the Year.

The Blue Devils cruised through 10 straight regular season victories and were ranked fourth statewide, but lost their regional crown to Brookville.

Bryan Price and Harl Stevenson of Circleville and Joe Berger of Teays Valley all received honorable mention on the Associated Press All-Ohio Class AA football team.

Fouchey, 5-foot-9 and 175 pounds, has been brilliant for two straight seasons. He followed a 1,763-yard junior campaign with 1,830 yards in 203 rushes this fall, an 8.7 yard average.

Ontario threw only 42 passes in an undefeated season and AA State Lineman of the Year Kevin Scott caught 32 of them for 735 yards and four touchdowns. Scott, a 6-4, 185-pound senior, also ranks as Ontario's greatest blocker ever.

Jim Rittay climaxed a spectacular year by earning the AA Ohio Coach of the Year title. The 27-year-old Rittay, in his very first try at head coaching, guided Elyria Catholic to an 8-1-0 regular season and its first playoff championship.

The selections were made with the recommendations of a statewide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

The No. 1 Class AA all-state offensive unit is led by Brooklyn quarterback Rick Trocano. The 6-foot-2, 195-pound senior passed for 1,700 yards and 17 touchdowns and ran for 564 yards and seven more scores.

Besides Fouchey, the running backs are Kevin Cannon of poll champion New Lexington, Greg Jones of Elyria West and Bryan Thomas of Elyria Catholic.

Thomas, only a junior, climaxed a

Westfall Has Fundamentals Program

The Westfall School District will begin its sixth grade basketball fundamentals program this Saturday morning at the high school gym.

According to Head Basketball Coach Mike Eckle, the program will run Dec. 4, 11, and 18 and break for the holidays. After the first of the year, the program will be held on Jan. 8, 15, 22, and 29.

There will probably be a round-robin type tournament held in the first Saturdays of February. Eckle stated that the program will stress the fundamentals of basketball and the game itself. That will be what the coaches will work on every session.

Coaches will be Eckle, Karshner, and Williams from the varsity, reserve, and freshmen programs. Also assisting will be members of the present varsity team and alumni players from the 1975-76 team.

Boys interested in participating should be at the high school gym Saturday morning. The doors will open at 8:50 a.m. Parents can pick up their children between 10:45 and 11 a.m. Participants should bring tennis shoes, socks, shorts, and a t-shirt. Other materials will be provided. There is no charge for the program.

"We're interested in giving boys the fundamentals of good basketball. We're happy with the way the program is shaping up in the school district at all levels. We want our kids to get off to a good start," said Eckle.

Going off the bench at the tip-off will be Jeff Collins and Mark Skinner at the guards, with Terry Wright and Randy Pontious at the forward spots. The man in the middle will be Chuck Cave, provided that he has shaken the illness bothering him all week. If Cave isn't ready, then the Braves will probably go with either Jerry Scanlan or Doug Woods in the lane.

Circleville will open its wrestling season tonight at Teays Valley with seven returning lettermen forming the nucleus of what should be a strong squad for coach Brent Bell.

Back from last years team are: Doug Brown, Dan DeFrank, Mike Hamilton, Tim Housh, Joe Leahy, Bill Mogan and Randy Speakman. Mogan and Hamilton will serve as co-captains of the 1976-77 Tigers.

Starting for the Tigers will be: Rodney Cook, 98-pound; Mike Hamilton, 105-pound; Randy Speakman, 112-pound; Doug Brown, 119-pound; Scott Watters, 126-pound; John Harr, 132-pound; Eric Berlin, 138-pound; Joe Leahy, 145-pound; Steve Vinkovich, 155-pound; Tim Herron, 167-pound; Bill Mogan, 175-pound; Tim Housh, 185-pound; Paul Heffelfinger, heavyweight.

The reserve match will start at 6:30 p.m. with the varsity getting underway at 8 p.m.

"I'm looking forward to a good wrestling year as we have a team that should improve with each match," Circleville coach Brent Bell stated.

"The returning veterans should give us a sound base to work from and the seven new starters are all very good wrestlers who will learn and improve rapidly. We have only one thing in mind and that is to build toward the South Central Ohio League championship. We may lose a few early matches but by the time the league rolls around we should have a very sound team ready to defend our title."

"I'm very pleased with the quality of our younger wrestlers and believe the competition for varsity berths will become quite intense before the season is very old," Bell commented.

All-Ohio Class AA Players Named

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Unbeaten Cincinnati Reading, stung at missing the state high school playoffs, gained some consolation Wednesday when star rusher Tom Fouchey was named The Associated Press' Ohio Class AA Back of the Year.

The Blue Devils cruised through 10 straight regular season victories and were ranked fourth statewide, but lost their regional crown to Brookville.

Bryan Price and Earl Stevenson of Circleville and Joe Berger of Teays Valley all received honorable mention on the Associated Press All-Ohio Class AA football team.

Fouchey, 5-foot-9 and 175 pounds, has been brilliant for two straight seasons. He followed a 1,763-yard junior campaign with 1,830 yards in 203 rushes this fall, an 8.7 yard average.

Ontario threw only 42 passes in an undefeated season and AA State Lineman of the Year Kevin Scott caught 32 of them for 735 yards and four touchdowns. Scott, a 6-4, 185-pound senior, also ranks as Ontario's greatest blocker ever.

Jim Rittay climaxed a spectacular year by earning the AA Ohio Coach of the Year title. The 27-year-old Rittay, in his very first try at head coaching, guided Elyria Catholic to an 8-1-0 regular season and its first playoff championship.

The selections were made with the recommendations of a statewide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

The No. 1 Class AA all-state offensive unit is led by Brooklyn quarterback Rick Trocano. The 6-foot-2, 195-pound senior passed for 1,700 yards and 17 touchdowns and ran for 564 yards and seven more scores.

Besides Fouchey, the running backs are Kevin Cannon of poll champion New Lexington, Greg Jones of Elyria West and Byran Thomas of Elyria Catholic.

Thomas, only a junior, climaxed a

Westfall Has Fundamentals Program

The Westfall School District will begin its sixth grade basketball fundamentals program this Saturday morning at the high school gym.

According to Head Basketball Coach Mike Eckle, the program will run Dec. 4, 11, and 18 and break for the holidays. After the first of the year, the program will be held on Jan. 8, 15, 22, and 29.

There will probably be a round-robin type tournament held in the first Saturdays of February. Eckle stated that the program will stress the fundamentals of basketball and the game itself. That will be what the coaches will work on every session.

Coaches will be Eckle, Karshner, and Williams from the varsity, reserve, and freshmen programs. Also assisting will be members of the present varsity team and alumni players from the 1975-76 team.

Boys interested in participating should be at the high school gym Saturday morning. The doors will open at 8:50 a.m. Parents can pick up their children between 10:45 and 11 a.m. Participants should bring tennis shoes, socks, shorts, and a t-shirt. Other materials will be provided. There is no charge for the program.

"We're interested in giving boys the fundamentals of good basketball. We're happy with the way the program is shaping up in the school district at all levels. We want our kids to get off to a good start," said Eckle.

Pheasant Hunting Is Surprise

By JIM DAUBEL
For The Associated Press
The preseason hunting predictions were mixed: Rabbits up dramatically, quail so-so and pheasants, well, sorry you asked.
The upbeat report on bunnies carried through opening day Nov. 15. Game protectors counted 1,155 rabbits taken by 2,653 hunters surveyed, a 10.5 per cent increase over last year.
The quail harvest as measured on opening day was down 3 per cent from last year, which was expected.
Surprising, however, was the first-day pheasant bag which showed a 17 per cent increase statewide, according to the Wildlife Division's field census.
Preseason forecasts are issued by the division based on extensive road counts taken by rural mail carriers and by game protectors in all of Ohio's 88 counties.
The word in August on anticipated ringneck populations was not optimistic. "I think the pheasant trends are down," observed one state wildlife administrator. "The history of the pheasant in Ohio has not been good and I don't see anything happening that would change that."

One of the state's most popular gamebirds two decades ago, the gaudy ringneck has fallen on hard times. Its population decline can be attributed to several factors, including the change to fall plowing, "clean farming," the disappearance of small farms, heavy agricultural use of chemicals and the growth of vegetable crops in formerly grain-producing regions.

Rabbits, on the other hand, multiplied last spring like, well, like rabbits. Aided by a warm, dry breeding period in March and April, cottontail populations were up as much as 66 per cent in some parts of Ohio, wildlife officials reported.

The best region for rabbits, opening day surveys showed, was southeastern Ohio. Preseason counts reflected the 66 per cent bunny boom in the northeast. Central Ohio followed with a 28 per cent increase, the southeast was up 18 per cent, the southwest up 14 per cent and West Central Ohio showed an 8 per cent jump. Northwestern Ohio counties remained the same as in 1975 and the South Central region recorded a 10 per cent decline.

Quail trends were fairly consistent between the summer road census and the opening day bag check.
Spring breeding results forecast a 7 per cent decline in bobwhites while only a 3 per cent drop was noted Nov. 15.

Quail may be hunted only on land which is signed into agreement with the state. Best prospects are in Morgan, Clermont, Warren, Brown, Highland, Adams, Washington, Gallia and Belmont counties in Southern Ohio.

Rabbits showed the greatest upsurge in Lake, Summit, Stark, Richland, Erie and Ottawa counties in Northern Ohio and Jackson, Morgan, Hocking and Warren counties in the South.

OSU Defeats Evansville

EVANSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Reserve forward Terry Burris may get a second look in practice this week after a 25-point effort in Ohio State's surprisingly easy basketball victory over the Evansville Purple Aces.

Burris, a 6-6 junior who showed occasional flashes of brilliance during his first two years with the Buckeyes, came off the bench to hit 11 of 12 from the field while playing a strong game under the boards.

At the same time, Ohio State's defense shut out Evansville's Little All-American Jeff Frey scoreless for the first time in his four-year college career.

Burris got help from senior guard Larry Bolden who had 20. But 6-6 center, Clarence Hammond, who poured in 21 in the Buckeyes first outing, joined Frey in the scoreless column.

Frey averaged 16 points a game for the Aces last year and garnered 16 in an opening game victory last week. He fouled out with just under two minutes left in the game Wednesday night and John Ed Washington topped Evansville with 17 points, while Bryan Taylor added 13.

Jubilee Jim Wins Lebanon Feature

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Jubilee Jim caught Edgewood Fiona at the wire to win the featured pace mile in the ninth race at Lebanon by a nose Friday night in 2:10.4-5.

The winner paid $6.40, $3.40 and $3.60, the place horse, $4.80 and $4 and Rollin Treat, the show horse, $7.40.

The 6-5 combination of Marmarg Susan and Steady Express paid $105.40 and the crowd of 983 bet $76,517.

Santo Alcala Signs Contract With Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Santo Alcala, who compiled an 11-4 record last season with Cincinnati, has signed a one-year contract for the 1977 season, the Reds announced today.

Alcala, 23, is the eighth player signed by the Reds.

Jerome Persell of Western Michigan averaged 180.3 yards per carry in his team's first three games this fall.

Tony Dorsett Heads AP All-America Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Dorsett, Pitt's fabulous running back who made the team as a freshman four seasons ago, was named to The Associated Press 1976 All-America college football team today along with three other great runners in a unique five-man backfield.

Joining Dorsett and riflearmed quarterback Tommy Kramer of Rice in the offensive backfield were running backs Ricky Bell of Southern California, Rob Lytle of Michigan and Terry Miller of Oklahoma State. Bell, Lytle and Miller were considered so even that it was impossible to separate them.

The only repeaters from 1975 on the first team were Bell and split end Larry Seivers of Tennessee. Dorsett made first team in 1973 — the first freshman so honored in 29 years — third team in 1974 and second team a year ago.

The AP All-America team will be seen on Bob Hope's Comedy Christmas Special on NBC-TV, Monday, Dec. 13, from 8:30-10 p.m., EST.

Coaches Bo Schembechler of Michigan and John Robinson of Southern California, the rival Rose Bowl coaches who each have two players on The AP All-America team, also will appear.

The only other first-teamers from last year's first three teams were linebacker Brian Ruff of The Citadel, up from the second unit, and defensive back Bill Armstrong of Wake Forest, elevated from the third team.

Joining Seivers at end was Michigan's Jim Smith, a clutch receiver and gifted kick returner. The offensive tackles were Georgia's 253-pound Mike "Moonpie" Wilson and Oklahoma's 275-pound Mike "U.S.S." Vaughan. The guards were a pair of 250-pounders, Ted Albrecht of California and T.J. Humphreys of Arkansas State, and the center was 245-pound John Yarno of Idaho, who beat out all the backs and was named Offensive Player of the Year in the Big Sky Conference.

The defensive line consisted of 247-pound Ross Browner of Notre Dame and 224-pound Bob Brudzinski of Ohio State at the ends, tackles Wilson Whitley of Houston, 268, and Eddie Edwards of Miami, Fla., a 250-pounder, and 225-pound nose guard Al Romano of Pitt.

The linebackers were Ruff, Robert Jackson of Texas A&M and Jerry Robinson of UCLA, while the deep backs were Armstrong, Gary Green of Baylor and Dennis Thurman of Southern Cal.

Top-rated Pitt, runner-up Michigan and third-ranked Southern Cal were the only schools to place two players on the first team.

All but four members of the 23-man first team are seniors. Miller, Browner and Thurman are juniors while Robinson is a sophomore.

Dorsett finished the regular season with an NCAA singleseason record of 1,948 yards. His 6,082 career yards was another mark, along with his 356 career points.

Bell, who missed setting a single-season record last year by six yards when he finished with 1,875, settled for 1,417 this year although he missed one game and played hurt in a couple of others. He carried 51 times against Washington State for an incredible 347 yards, just three short of the all-time record.

Miller rushed for 1,541 yards, second best ever by a Big Eight Conference runner. He was sensational in league games, gaining 81 against Kansas, 137 against Colorado, 159 against Oklahoma, 228 against Missouri, 149 against Nebraska, 221 against Kansas State and 199 against Iowa State. He had two other 100-yard games outside the conference and was named Big Eight Offensive Player of the Week four times in a five-week stretch.

Lytle, who played both tailback and fullback, is rated by Schembechler as the best running back he has ever had. Lytle was remarkably consistent and went over 100 yards eight times, including 180 against Michigan State, 175 against Indiana, 172 against Northwestern and 165 against Ohio State in the Rose Bowl showdown. His percarry average of 6.9 yards was the best of the four All-America running backs.

Kramer led the nation in total offense and passing. Although opponents knew Rice was going to throw the ball most of the time, Kramer still completed 269 of 501 passes — 24.5 completions per game — for 3,317 yards and 21 touchdowns. He threw only 19 interceptions, just one in every 26.3 passes, and finished his career by connecting on 27 of 52 for 409 yards against Southwest Conference champion Houston.

Bruins Beat Black Hawks In NHL, 5-3

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

A game between the Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks has taken added significance ever since star defenseman Bobby Orr left Boston's employ and joined the Hawks as a free agent. Even if Chicago has not signed the Bobby Orr that led the Bruins to Stanley Cup championships, his presence — or non-presence — still is felt.

Orr picked up an assist against his former teammates Wednesday night, but two goals by Jean Ratelle and a solid performance by stand-in goalie Jim Petrie carried Boston to a 5-3 triumph.

"The news of our death was premature," chortled volatile Bruins Coach Don Cherry. "Just because we lost two games in a row I guess a lot of people started giving up on us."

But the Bruins did not give up on themselves against the Black Hawks, who now have lost five of their last six games.

"I sometimes get the feeling some players are just standing there," said Chicago Coach Billy Reay. "We certainly didn't get a complete effort from everybody."

In the other National Hockey League games Wednesday night, the Toronto Maple Leafs downed the Los Angeles Kings 6-3, the Philadelphia Flyers and Minnesota North Stars tied 2-2, the Colorado Rockies topped the Cleveland Barons 5-3, the New York Rangers beat the Washington Capitals 4-1, and the Detroit Red Wings downed the Vancouver Canucks 5-2.

The only 1-0 World Series game the Yankees ever won in Yankee Stadium was decided on a ninth-inning home run by Tommy Henrich in the first game in 1949.

Pheasant Hunting Is Surprise

By JIM DAUBEL
For The Associated Press
The preseason hunting predictions were mixed: Rabbits up dramatically, quail so-so and pheasants, well, sorry you asked.

The upbeat report on bunnies carried through opening day Nov. 15. Game protectors counted 1,155 rabbits taken by 2,653 hunters surveyed, a 10.5 per cent increase over last year.

The quail harvest as measured on opening day was down 3 per cent from last year, which was expected.

Surprising, however, was the first-day pheasant bag which showed a 17 per cent increase statewide, according to the Wildlife Division's field census.

Preseason forecasts are issued by the division based on extensive road counts taken by rural mail carriers and by game protectors in all of Ohio's 88 counties.

The word in August on anticipated ringneck populations was not optimistic. "I think the pheasant trends are down," observed one state wildlife administrator. "The history of the pheasant in Ohio has not been good and I don't see anything happening that would change that."

One of the state's most popular gamebirds two decades ago, the gaudy ringneck has fallen on hard times. Its population decline can be attributed to several factors, including the change to fall plowing, "clean farming," the disappearance of small farms, heavy agricultural use of chemicals and the growth of vegetable crops in formerly grain-producing regions.

Rabbits, on the other hand, multiplied last spring like, well, like rabbits. Aided by a warm, dry breeding period in March and April, cottontail populations were up as much as 66 per cent in some parts of Ohio, wildlife officials reported.

The best region for rabbits, opening day surveys showed, was southeastern Ohio. Preseason counts reflected the 66 per cent bunny boom in the northeast. Central Ohio followed with a 28 per cent increase, the southeast was up 18 per cent, the southwest up 14 per cent and West Central Ohio showed an 8 per cent jump. Northwestern Ohio counties remained the same as in 1975 and the South Central region recorded a 10 per cent decline.

Quail trends were fairly consistent between the summer road census and the opening day bag check. Spring breeding results forecast a 7 per cent decline in bobwhites while only a 3 per cent drop was noted Nov. 15.

Quail may be hunted only on land which is signed into agreement with the state. Best prospects are in Morgan, Clermont, Warren, Brown, Highland, Adams, Washington, Gallia and Belmont counties in Southern Ohio.

Rabbits showed the greatest upsurge in Lake, Summit, Stark, Richland, Erie and Ottawa counties in Northern Ohio and Jackson, Morgan, Hocking and Warren counties in the South.

OSU Defeats Evansville

EVANSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Reserve forward Terry Burris may get a second look in practice this week after a 25-point effort in Ohio State's surprisingly easy basketball victory over the Evansville Purple Aces.

Burris, a 6-6 junior who showed occasional flashes of brilliance during his first two years with the Buckeyes, came off the bench to hit 11 of 12 from the field while playing a strong game under the boards.

At the same time, Ohio State's defense shut out Evansville's Little All-American Jeff Frey scoreless for the first time in his four-year college career.

Burris got help from senior guard Larry Bolden who had 20. But 6-6 center, Clance Hammond, who poured in 21 in the Buckeyes first outing, joined Frey in the scoreless column.

Frey averaged 16 points a game for the Aces last year and garnered 16 in an opening game victory last week. He fouled out with just under two minutes left in the game Wednesday night and John Ed Washington topped Evansville with 17 points, while Bryan Taylor added 13.

Jubilee Jim Wins Lebanon Feature

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Jubilee Jim caught Edgewood Fiona at the wire to win the featured pace mile in the ninth race at Lebanon by a nose Friday night in 2:10.4-5.

The winner paid $6.40, $3.40 and $3.60, the place horse, $4.80 and $4 and Rollin Treat, the show horse, $7.40.

The 6-5 combination of Marmarg Susan and Steady Express paid $105.40 and the crowd of 983 bet $76,517.

Santo Alcala Signs Contract With Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Santo Alcala, who compiled an 11-4 record last season with Cincinnati, has signed a one-year contract for the 1977 season, the Reds announced today.

Alcala, 23, is the eighth player signed by the Reds.

Jerome Persell of Western Michigan averaged 180.3 yards per carry in his team's first three games this fall.

Tony Dorsett Heads AP All-America Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Dorsett, Pitt's fabulous running back who made the team as a freshman four seasons ago, was named to The Associated Press 1976 All-America college football team today along with three other great runners in a unique five-man backfield.

Joining Dorsett and riflearmed quarterback Tommy Kramer of Rice in the offensive backfield were running backs Ricky Bell of Southern California, Rob Lytle of Michigan and Terry Miller of Oklahoma State. Bell, Lytle and Miller were considered so even that it was impossible to separate them.

The only repeaters from 1975 on the first team were Bell and split end Larry Seivers of Tennessee. Dorsett made first team in 1973 — the first freshman so honored in 29 years — third team in 1974 and second team a year ago.

The AP All-America team will be seen on Bob Hope's Comedy Christmas Special on NBC-TV, Monday, Dec. 13, from 8:30-10 p.m., EST.

Coaches Bo Schembechler of Michigan and John Robinson of Southern California, the rival Rose Bowl coaches who each have two players on The AP All-America team, also will appear.

Bruins Beat Black Hawks In NHL, 5-3

The only 1-0 World Series game the Yankees ever won in Yankee Stadium was decided on a ninth-inning home run by Tommy Henrich in the first game in 1949.

last year's first three teams were linebacker Brian Ruff of The Citadel, up from the second unit, and defensive back Bill Armstrong of Wake Forest, elevated from the third team.

Joining Seivers at end was Michigan's Jim Smith, a clutch receiver and gifted kick returner. The offensive tackles were Georgia's 253-pound Mike "Moonpie" Wilson and Oklahoma's 275-pound Mike "U.S.S." Vaughan. The guards were a pair of 250-pounders, Ted Albrecht of California and T.J. Humphreys of Arkansas State, and the center was 245-pound John Yarno of Idaho, who beat out all the backs and was named Offensive Player of the Year in the Big Sky Conference.

The defensive line consisted of 247-pound Ross Browner of Notre Dame and 224-pound Bob Brudzinski of Ohio State at the ends, tackles Wilson Whitley of Houston, 268, and Eddie Edwards of Miami, Fla., a 250-pounder, and 225-pound nose guard Al Romano of Pitt.

The linebackers were Ruff, Robert Jackson of Texas A&M and Jerry Robinson of UCLA, while the deep backs were Armstrong, Gary Green of Baylor and Dennis Thurman of Southern Cal.

Top-rated Pitt, runner-up Michigan and third-ranked Southern Cal were the only schools to place two players on the first team.

All but four members of the 23-man first team are seniors. Miller, Browner and Thurman are juniors while Robinson is a sophomore.

Dorsett finished the regular season with an NCAA singleseason record of 1,948 yards. His 6,082 career yards was another mark, along with his 356 career points.

Bell, who missed setting a single-season record last year by six yards when he finished with 1,875, settled for 1,417 this year although he missed one game and played hurt in a couple of others. He carried 51 times against Washington State for an incredible 347 yards, just three short of the all-time record.

Miller rushed for 1,541 yards, second best ever by a Big Eight Conference runner. He was sensational in league games, gaining 81 against Kansas, 137 against Colorado, 159 against Oklahoma, 228 against Missouri, 149 against Nebraska, 221 against Kansas State and 199 against Iowa State. He had two other 100-yard games outside the conference and was named Big Eight Offensive Player of the Week four times in a five-week stretch.

Lytle, who played both tailback and fullback, is rated by Schembechler as the best running back he has ever had. Lytle was remarkably consistent and went over 100 yards eight times, including 180 against Michigan State, 175 against Indiana, 172 against Northwestern and 165 against Ohio State in the Rose Bowl showdown. His percarry average of 6.9 yards was the best of the four All-America running backs.

Kramer led the nation in total offense and passing. Although opponents knew Rice was going to throw the ball most of the time, Kramer still completed 269 of 501 passes — 24.5 completions per game — for 3,317 yards and 21 touchdowns. He threw only 19 interceptions, just one in every 26.3 passes, and finished his career by connecting on 27 of 52 for 409 yards against Southwest Conference champion Houston.

Recount Nears End; Carter Lead Widens

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Republican hopes appeared dim today that a recount of Ohio's more than four million presidential ballots would take Ohio's 25 electoral votes from President-elect Jimmy Carter and put them into President Ford's column. Three days into the recount, Secretary of State Ted W. Brown reported Wednesday it was 75 per cent complete and said the new figures added 1,671 votes to Carter's original margin of 9,333. A breakdown of the 56 counties and 12 partially completed counties showed the president-elect had a net gain of 1,427 votes while the president lost 244. The recount is expected to be completed no later than next Wednesday when Brown said he would certify the election of Ohio's members in the U.S. Electoral College so that their official votes for president may be cast Dec. 13. The college meets the same day in the separate 50 states to carry out the mandates of their respective electorates. There is a pending legal effort — by the Republican, U.S. Labor, and American Parties— to block Ohio's contingent from meeting, but it has not materialized. Massillon attorney Richard G. Reichel, representing the three parties in a suit alleging Carter won Ohio as a result of vote fraud, said Tuesday he would seek a federal court injunction blocking the session of Ohio electors a week from next Monday in the Ohio House chamber. Despite the fact that Carter has steadily gained ground on the defeated president since the recount began Monday, Republicans who demanded the recount—and had it granted, at state expense—indicated strongly Wednesday they are not disposed to call it off. Russell B. Leach, Franklin County's Republican chairman, and 24 other unsuccessful GOP electoral college candidates, petitioned Brown for the recount under a law that requires the state to pay the costs if a margin of victory is less than 1/2 of one per cent.

Carter's initial edge was .23 of one per cent. Leach said Wednesday, in spite of costs estimated at $75,000 to $80,000, he felt that asking Brown to stop the recount now would result in little savings. "It is my understanding that most of the costs already have been incurred." The Columbus attorney also said he understood that to halt the recount, a majority of the 25 GOP elector candidates would have to make a formal request, and that he did not feel disposed "at this point" to try to get in touch with the petitioners scattered all across Ohio. The secretary of state, who required Leach to obtain the signatures of a majority of the other electors before ordering the recount, confirmed he expected a majority of them would have to consent to halting the effort.

Great Art Bandits Stole Only Trash

NEW YORK (AP) — I had painted the public hall of our apartment building a gleaming white and needed something to break up the monotony. My solution: colorful, abstract oil paintings strategically placed. Little did I know my solution would cause the Great West Side art robbery. After pricing some commercial oil paintings and getting a nosebleed, I decided to do the paintings myself. I bought four canvasses and some bright colored oils and began my first attempt at art since I was ordered into remedial fingerprinting in the third grade. My first major problem: I forgot to buy artist's brushes. No matter, I still had the brushes from the hall paint job. In three hours I had four bizarre, but colorful, canvasses. In a fit of whimsy, I decided it would be fun to title the paintings. I placed little white tags at the bottom of each one. "Paint Hits Fan, an Alderman original from his Mal a La Gorge period, price $230,000."

Translation: a speckled, streaked, dribbled-on patchwork of red, white and blue that isn't worth a plug nickel but is guaranteed to give you vertigo. My first major exhibition complete, I retired to my apartment for a late night beer. Suddenly, our dogs began barking, a signal that someone was in the hall. My wife poked her head out of our apartment just in time to hear the door to the building slam shut. She then noticed that two of the paintings were missing. "Did you move your paintings?" "No," I said. "Well," she said, "then we've been robbed." We then called the police, who dutifully came, took notes and asked: "What value would you place on the paintings?" My wife spoke first: "Well, the canvas cost $6...."

Tom McCreary family of Marysville, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennett and family of East Liberty and Norma Wilson of Grove City.

"Tut, tut," I interrupted. "How can you place a value on a piece of art ...?" The officer wrote down $6, winked at my wife and said with typical New York City, robbery-every-minute logic: "You should be flattered. He could have taken your stereo." I am flattered, but that thief is going to be disappointed if he has his heart set on $230,000.

Driver Hurt In Accident

Randy L. Murphy, 24, Wheelersburg, suffered minor injuries when his car crashed on Route 23, one-tenth of a mile north of the Emerson Road intersection.

He was referred to a doctor for treatment of a laceration to his forehead and an abrasion to his right hand, according to Deputy Sheriff Jim Deal, who investigated the 10:42 p.m. Wednesday accident.

According to his report, Murphy was driving south on Route 23 when the right front tire of his car blew out. The vehicle went off the right side for 51 feet, hit a guardrail and continued along it for 90 feet. After hitting the end of the bridge, the car drove along the side of the bridge for 180 feet and then went 84 feet off the right side.

Recount Nears End; Carter Lead Widens

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Republican hopes appeared dim today that a recount of Ohio's more than four million presidential ballots would take Ohio's 25 electoral votes from President-elect Jimmy Carter and put them into President Ford's column. Three days into the recount, Secretary of State Ted W. Brown reported Wednesday it was 75 per cent complete and said the new figures added 1,671 votes to Carter's original margin of 9,333. A breakdown of the 56 counties and 12 partially completed counties showed the president-elect had a net gain of 1,427 votes while the president lost 244. The recount is expected to be completed no later than next Wednesday when Brown said he would certify the election of Ohio's members in the U.S. Electoral College so that their official votes for president may be cast Dec. 13. The college meets the same day in the separate 50 states to carry out the mandates of their respective electorates. There is a pending legal effort — by the Republican, U.S. Labor, and American Parties — to block Ohio's contingent from meeting, but it has not materialized. Massillon attorney Richard G. Reichel, representing the three parties in a suit alleging Carter won Ohio as a result of vote fraud, said Tuesday he would seek a federal court injunction blocking the session of Ohio electors a week from next Monday in the Ohio House chamber.

Despite the fact that Carter has steadily gained ground on the defeated president since the recount began Monday, Republicans who demanded the recount — and had it granted, at state expense — indicated strongly Wednesday they are not disposed to call it off.

Russell B. Leach, Franklin County's Republican chairman, and 24 other unsuccessful GOP electoral college candidates, petitioned Brown for the recount under a law that requires the state to pay the costs if a margin of victory is less than 1/2 of one per cent.

Carter's initial edge was .23 of one per cent.

Leach said Wednesday, in spite of costs estimated at $75,000 to $80,000, he felt that asking Brown to stop the recount now would result in little savings. "It is my understanding that most of the costs already have been incurred."

The Columbus attorney also said he understood that to halt the recount, a majority of the 25 GOP elector candidates would have to make a formal request, and that he did not feel disposed "at this point" to try to get in touch with the petitioners scattered all across Ohio.

The secretary of state, who required Leach to obtain the signatures of a majority of the other electors before ordering the recount, confirmed he expected a majority of them would have to consent to halting the effort.

Carter Energy Policy To Center On Coal Use

WASHINGTON (AP)—If President-elect Jimmy Carter carries out all his past energy proposals, the nation can anticipate higher natural gas prices, tight oil supplies and the revival of Appalachia's coal country.

Carter may not get to carry them out; Congress and circumstances may change his mind or thwart his plans.

In position papers and comments on energy during his campaign, however, Carter has laid out lengthy blueprints for his energy plans.

"The major thrust of the energy problem," Carter has argued, "should be away from oil toward coal and solar energy, with heavy emphasis on conservation."

"Whatever we cannot accomplish with these measures would have to be made up temporarily and as a last resort by atomic power," he said.

President Ford's administration has urged a doubling of coal production by 1985 and has moved to resume leasing of federal coal lands in the West.

"If there is a choice to be made," said Carter, "my own attitude would be to strengthen the production of coal in the Appalachian regions."

"You've got some very serious problems in the West," added Carter, referring to strip mining and other environmental impacts and the scarcity of water.

And Appalachia, where coal once was king, badly needs the economic revival that a new coal boom would bring, Carter pointed out.

The Federal Energy Administration estimated last year that eastern coal production would rise some 22 percent by 1980, but its share of the total market would slip from 76 to 70.5 percent as production races ahead in the West.

That potential shift represents some 46.6 million tons of coal worth nearly $1 billion a year, at recent prices, to the region that gets to produce it, and Carter seems to feel most of that business should stay in Appalachia.

Eventually, coal will be converted into synthetic oil and gas, Carter noted, but he suggested these processes should center not in the West but in the upper Midwest where water is abundant.

To stimulate natural gas production, Carter has favored removal of federal regulation over prices charged for new supplies by producers to interstate pipelines, at least for a five-year trial period.

The Federal Power Commission recently tripled the producers' ceiling price and estimated this would cost consumers an additional $1.5 billion in the first year — about $15 more each year on the average homeowner's gas bill.

If the same amounts of gas were deregulated entirely and climbed to recent unregulated prices, the consumer impact might hit some $2.35 billion, adding $23 to the average yearly gas bill, with further increases sure to follow.

To hold down U.S. dependence on foreign oil, Carter has proposed "a quota system that would keep imports at the present 40 per cent level."

But American Petroleum Institute statistics estimate that oil imports will average 41 per cent this year, and have been increasing 2.5 percent a year since 1968.

At that rate, unrestricted imports would supply 51 per cent of the nation's oil four years from now. A strict 40 per cent limit would amount to a self-imposed 11 per cent oil shortage by the end of Carter's first term — roughly equal to the worst of the Arab oil embargo of 1973-1974.

Whether such a quota would create actual shortages of gasoline and heating oil would depend on the nation's success at energy substitution and conservation.

"If it becomes necessary," Carter has warned, "petroleum supplies available for consumption should be allocated" as was done during the Arab embargo.

Carter has proposed a series of strong energy conservation measures, including: efficiency standards for electrical appliances; mandatory improvements in building insulation; a ban on advertising that promotes electricity consumption, and abandonment of utility rates that charge the lowest electricity prices to the biggest users.

Carter even has proposed "stand-by excise taxes" that could be imposed on selected petroleum products to reduce consumption.

Gasoline would be the prime target, as the petroleum fuel with the most flexible demand and the only major category whose consumption now surpasses its 1973 levels.

Carter has not indicated how large the excise tax might be, but past experience suggests it would have to start at several cents per gallon, at least, to have any substantial effect.

On the other hand, some Carter proposals would tend to reduce the prices of petroleum products, so the final consumer impact cannot be predicted.

Carter wants to encourage U.S. oil production, but has not said how.

The encouragement might come through appropriate price regulations favoring new production. Carter opposed removal of price controls from domestic "old" oil, suggesting its price be held about $3 per barrel below international oil prices. New oil, presumably, could claim the higher international price.

This policy might require amendment of last year's energy act, which provided for phasing out oil price controls by late 1979.

To the extent that these measures still leave a gap between U.S. energy supply and demand, Carter said, nuclear energy would have to fill it.

Carter, who was trained in nuclear engineering in the Navy, has proposed strict, and probably costly, new safety measures: placing atomic plants underground; encasing reactors in large, double-walled vacuum chambers so air would rush in through any break instead of out, and posting federal agents in control rooms, with authority to shut down a plant in an emergency.

Such measures might make nuclear power more acceptable to present opponents, but would increase the cost of fission-generated electricity.

Carter's energy package also included:

- A slowdown in development of the nuclear "breeder" reactor, which would both use and produce plutonium, a hazardous radioactive metal suitable for atomic bombs.
- A shift of research funds from nuclear power toward solar energy, conservation and cleaner ways to burn coal.
- Proposal of a five-year

More Snow In Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Snow fell across most of the Great Lakes region this morning. It was heaviest in western New York, where up to four feet of snow already covered the ground.

In the six-hour period ending at 1 a.m. est, two inches of new snow fell at Buffalo and Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Muskegon, Mich.

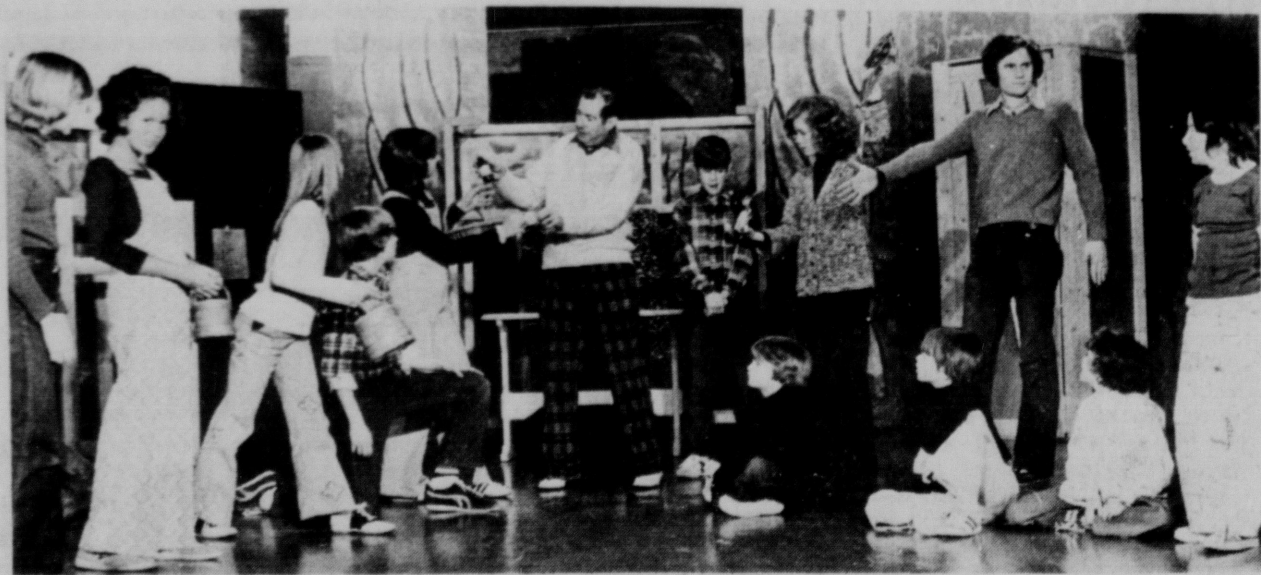

Snow also fell in eastern South Dakota, Iowa, northern Illinois and the Ohio valley.

A cold front stretching westward across the Great Lakes and the northern plains brought another surge of cold Canadian air into the north central portion of the nation.

Early morning temperatures dipped below zero from northern Michigan to Wisconsin and Minnesota. Readings fell to 15 or 20 degrees below zero across much of northern Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

Whether such a quota would create actual shortages of gasoline and heating oil would depend on the nation's success at energy substitution and conservation.

"If it becomes necessary," Carter has warned, "petroleum supplies available for consumption should be allocated" as was done during the Arab embargo.

Carter has proposed a series of strong energy conservation measures, including: efficiency standards for electrical appliances; mandatory improvements in building insulation; a ban on advertising that promotes electricity consumption, and abandonment of utility rates that charge the lowest electricity prices to the biggest users.

Carter even has proposed "stand-by excise taxes" that could be imposed on selected petroleum products to reduce consumption.

Gasoline would be the prime target, as the petroleum fuel with the most flexible demand and the only major category whose consumption now surpasses its 1973 levels.

Carter has not indicated how large the excise tax might be, but past experience suggests it would have to start at several cents per gallon, at least, to have any substantial effect.

On the other hand, some Carter proposals would tend to reduce the prices of petroleum products, so the final consumer impact cannot be predicted.

Carter wants to encourage U.S. oil production, but has not said how.

The encouragement might come through appropriate price regulations favoring new production. Carter opposed removal of price controls from domestic "old" oil, suggesting its price be held about $3 per barrel below international oil prices. New oil, presumably, could claim the higher international price.

This policy might require amendment of last year's energy act, which provided for phasing out oil price controls by late 1979.

To the extent that these measures still leave a gap between U.S. energy supply and demand, Carter said, nuclear energy would have to fill it.

Carter, who was trained in nuclear engineering in the Navy, has proposed strict, and probably costly, new safety measures: placing atomic plants underground; encasing reactors in large, double-walled vacuum chambers so air would rush in through any break instead of out, and posting federal agents in control rooms, with authority to shut down a plant in an emergency.

Such measures might make nuclear power more acceptable to present opponents, but would increase the cost of fission-generated electricity.

Carter's energy package also included:

—A slowdown in development of the nuclear "breeder" reactor, which would both use and produce plutonium, a hazardous radioactive metal suitable for atomic bombs.

—A shift of research funds from nuclear power toward solar energy, conservation and cleaner ways to burn coal.

—Proposal of a five-year

More Snow In Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Snow fell across most of the Great Lakes region this morning. It was heaviest in western New York, where up to four feet of snow already covered the ground.

In the six-hour period ending at 1 a.m. est, two inches of new snow fell at Buffalo and Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Muskegon, Mich.

Snow also fell in eastern South Dakota, Iowa, northern Illinois and the Ohio valley.

A cold front stretching westward across the Great Lakes and the northern plains brought another surge of cold Canadian air into the north central portion of the nation.

Early morning temperatures dipped below zero from northern Michigan to Wisconsin and Minnesota. Readings fell to 15 or 20 degrees below zero across much of northern Minnesota and eastern North Dakota.

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth sign.

FOR FRIDAY

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): Watch emotions carefully. Don't let sudden enthusiasms carry you to a point where they actually become obsessions.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Rumors now circulating could undermine your confidence, if you let them. Use that optimism and good judgment of yours and ignore them.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Don't let a prevalent spirit of restlessness and nervous energy lead you into erratic behavior. You could land in "hot water."

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): Morning hours may be somewhat on the dull side, but momentum picks up after noon; should lead to bright prospects - both business-wise and socially.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Favorable solar influences now promise increasing gains. But some minor situations may have to be ironed out before you can go ahead with long-range plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): You may have moments of depression. Don't try to cover them up with an "act." Banish them completely by getting out and doing things which stimulate your mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): Do not become disillusioned if some disapprove of your ideas and are unwilling to fall in with your plans. If understanding and tolerant, you just COULD bring them around.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 23): Make no decisions until all avenues have been explored. Should temporary deterrents appear, handle them discerningly, with clear-headedness, smart control.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Your ingenuity, foresight and intuition should be at a peak now. A good time to look into new offerings and gauge their real value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Stellar influences now warn against misleading influences, deceit and dubious schemes. Be alert and counteract with your innate integrity and good judgment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): If you really have time for "extras" on a busy day, take them on judiciously. Don't overtax energies, and don't hesitate to ask for help if you find yourself in a bind.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Plenty of competition about, but don't let it dismay you. Anchor your sails to the well-founded and engage opponents with enthusiasm.

YOU BORN TODAY have been blessed with a high order of intellect and a truly brilliant imagination. Your ideas are always ingenious and you have the practicality needed to carry them out - a tremendous asset to any career. Endowed with quickness of perception and discriminating taste, you would make an outstanding literary or drama critic. LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS Radio, which in January 1973 began giving the nation the seven-nights-a-week "CBS Radio Mystery Theater," has a new Saturday-Sunday ear offering coming up the first week in February.

It's called the "General Mills Radio Adventure Theater," and will run promptly at 6:07 p.m. EST on Saturday, Feb. 5, says CBS Radio President Sam Cook Digges.

Digges, speaking by phone from New York, said the new weekend show will be an anthology series of such classic adventure yarns as "Robinson Crusoe," "Kidnapped" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

It's scheduled for early evening broadcasts, he says, so as to catch the family trade, particularly youngsters for whom radio drama is just something Grandad mutters nostalgically about now and then.

"We wanted to go with drama that would appeal to children broadcast at a time they could listen to it," Digges said.

"We've found we've had a lot of complaints because 'Mystery Theater' in many markets is on too late for youngsters to hear it."

He said that series, which CBS says now airs on 220 stations, 190 of them CBS affiliates, is fed the stations at 10:07 p.m. EST, an hour most tots theoretically are abed.

CBS hopes to get at least the same number of stations carrying the new weekend adventure series, he added. As with the mystery show, CBS affiliates will get first crack at it, then other stations.

He said the new show will be produced and directed by Hyman Brown, chief honcho on CBS' mystery radio series.

The new offering will air first-run episodes each Saturday and Sunday for 26 weeks this year, followed by 26 repeat weeks in which Saturday shows will air on Sundays, and Sunday shows on Saturdays.

However, Digges added, the new show won't be just a one-year proposition. General Mills, the sole sponsor, is signed up for what Digges called a long-term agreement. He didn't specify how long, though.

In any event, he added, this agreement will help the show avoid what happened to the "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" in almost three years on the air — operate at a financial loss.

Digges, who declined to say what the loss was, said it was incurred because the show was paid for on a participating sponsorship basis. And there were times, he conceded, sponsors didn't participate.

Weed Plague

FT. COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Two hardy, aggressive weeds, Johnson grass and shatter cane, are beginning to plague farmers in southeastern Colorado, according to Gene Heikes, extension professor of weed science at Colorado State University.

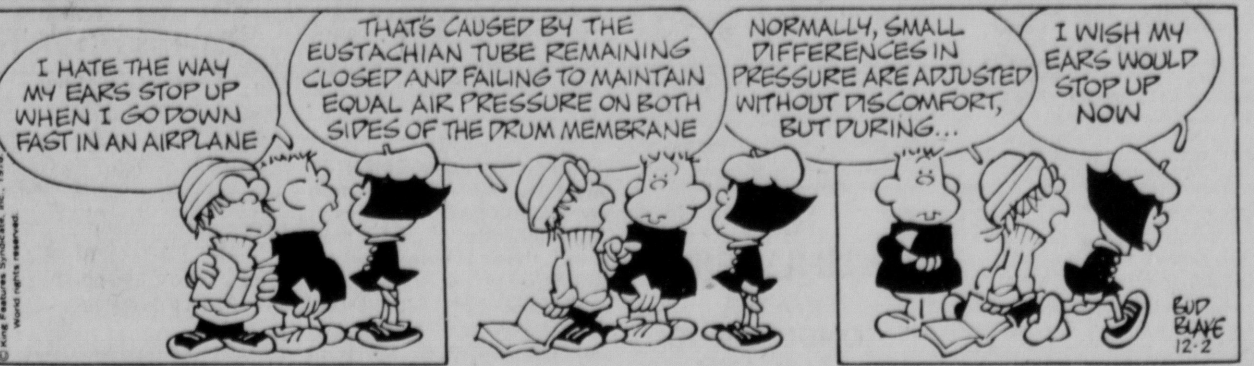

Johnson grass, which can grow to about four feet if uncontrolled, chokes out many low-lying crops, says Heikes. Shatter cane, a type of wild sorghum, can grow to more than six feet.

REALLY? — Staff members discovered this pop-eyed monster when they opened a Waltham, Mass., day care camp. Frog decided to take a dip in the camp's pool.

Toledo Upsets Mighty Indiana

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — "It was a great win for us and our conference," an ecstatic Toledo Basketball Coach Bob Nichols said after his undermanned Rockets shocked defending national champion Indiana Wednesday night.

Toledo "hung tough" in Nichols' words when the taller Hoosier erased a 42-29 deficit and pulled even late in the game. The Rockets tightened up on defense and poured in six straight points to seal the 59-57 victory and hand Indiana its first regular season loss in three years.

It was a good night all around for the Mid-American Conference. Ohio University dumped the Pittsburgh Panthers 72-62, and Bowling Green crushed Eastern Illinois 87-61.

But it was especially sweet for Toledo, playing a dedication game for its new field house, Centennial Hall, before a roaring, standing room only crowd of 9,662.

Nichols gave the game ball to 6-2 senior Jeff Seeman who failed to score a point, but swarmed all over the court on defense. "Indiana had difficulty getting the inside because of Seeman's pressure," Nichols said.

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight said his team was outplayed and out hustled.

"The key to the game was the way Toledo played as a team," Knight said. "Defensively, it was a team victory."

Fouls Kill Nets; Phoenix Suns Win

By The Associated Press
When veteran Mel Daniels came to the New York Nets' training camp this year, he was interested in playing center — not coaching.

But that is what he wound up doing for the Nets Wednesday night.

The chain of command did not have many links left after the officials got finished with New York, and Daniels was the next in succession at the end of a wild, 106-96 loss to the Phoenix Suns.

"This was a strange game ... a very strange game," said Nets Coach Kevin Loughery after the controversial

National Basketball Association contest. "I didn't know what was going on out there."

Loughery knew even less after he got his second technical foul and was ejected with about four minutes remaining. Loughery, who had run-ins with referee Jack Madden in the old American Basketball Association, protested one of his calls with his usual ferocity.

Madden did a complete job on the Nets' coaching staff, also tossing out angry Rod Thorn, Loughery's assistant, at another point. John Williamson, one of the Nets' top players, protested too much and he, too, was thrown out during the argumentative game.

That left it up to team leader Nate Archibald to run the club, but when he fouled out at the end, Daniels wound up as the coach.

In other NBA games, the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Kansas City Kings 98-91 in overtime; the Philadelphia 76ers whipped the Denver Nuggets 114-102; the Boston Celtics tripped the Seattle SuperSonics 107-103; the New Orleans Jazz hammered the Milwaukee Bucks 126-105; the Houston Rockets defeated the Detroit Pistons 110-104, and the Portland Trail Blazers nipped the Indiana Pacers 101-100.

Paul Westphal scored 23 points and Garfield Heard hauled down 18 rebounds for Phoenix. Westphal scored 15 of his points in the second quarter, when the Suns broke open the game by outscoring the Nets 32-15 and taking a 57-40 lead at the half.

Toledo Upsets Mighty Indiana

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — "It was a great win for us and our conference," an ecstatic Toledo Basketball Coach Bob Nichols said after his undermanned Rockets shocked defending national champion Indiana Wednesday night.

Toledo "hung tough" in Nichols' words when the taller Hoosier erased a 42-29 deficit and pulled even late in the game. The Rockets tightened up on defense and poured in six straight points to seal the 59-57 victory and hand Indiana its first regular season loss in three years.

It was a good night all around for the Mid-American Conference. Ohio University dumped the Pittsburgh Panthers 72-62, and Bowling Green crushed Eastern Illinois 87-61.

But it was especially sweet for Toledo, playing a dedication game for its new field house, Centennial Hall, before a roaring, standing room only crowd of 9,662.

Nichols gave the game ball to 6-2 senior Jeff Seeman who failed to score a point, but swarmed all over the court on defense. "Indiana had difficulty getting the inside because of Seeman's pressure," Nichols said.

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight said his team was outplayed and out hustled.

"The key to the game was the way Toledo played as a team," Knight said. "Defensively, it was a team victory."

Although their tallest man was only 6-8, the Rockets out-rebounded Indiana, 38-36 and 6-6 1/2 freshman Dick Miller matched the Hoosier's 6-11 Kent Benson with 13 grabs off the boards.

Miller added 14 points, while his backcourt mate Stan Joplin led all scorers with 21, and Ted Williams tallied 15. Benson led the Hoosiers with 17.

Bowling Green's John Weinert was pleased with the victory in his MAC coaching debut, but said the Falcons still "have three things to do to become a good team."

"We have to establish a style of play...a bench and...a personality," Weinert said.

Weinert pointed to the performance of senior guard Tommy Harris as exemplifying what he is striving for.

He said Harris, who scored 25 of his 27 points in the first half as Bowling Green quickly took command of the game, "showed he's a team player and was totally unselfish in the second half."

Harris' 25 points was one shy of the Anderson Arena record set by Howard Komives in 1964 for the most points in one half.

Ohio University was paced by Steve Skaggs with 23 points in notching a season-opening triumph over Pittsburgh. A scoring surge in the closing minutes sewed up the victory for the Bobcats after Pittsburgh, now 1-1, had closed to within four points.

In other major Ohio college basketball action Wednesday night, Ohio State downed Evansville 74-62 as reserve Terry Burris poured in 25 points and Larry Bolden added 20.

Cincinnati humiliated Wright State 120-52 as the 12th-ranked Bearcats tied a school record of 55 field goals. All five starters scored in double figures, led by forward Brian Williams with 21.

Xavier handled Centre, Ky., with ease, 78-57, as all 14 of the Musketeers got into the game. Xavier, paced by Gary Whitfield with 19 points, built up 44-24 halftime advantage and maintained a 20-point lead through most of the second half.

In Hoosier-Buckeye Conference play, Defiance beat Bluffton 89-72 as Jim Kramer and Greg McGilvary bucketed 18 points apiece.

Elsewhere, it was Eastern Michigan 72, Cleveland State 69; Youngstown 100, Walsh 74; Ashland 96, Dyke 75; Muskingum 72, Baldwin-Wallace 55; Wooster 73, Ohio Wesleyan 66; Hiram 90, Denison 70; Findlay 92, Heidelberg 79; Oberlin 93, Case Reserve 75; Morris Harvey 84, Marietta 77; Rio Grande 91, Alderson-Broadbudd, W.Va. 88.

Fouls Kill Nets; Phoenix Suns Win

By The Associated Press
When veteran Mel Daniels came to the New York Nets' training camp this year, he was interested in playing center — not coaching.

But that is what he wound up doing for the Nets Wednesday night.

The chain of command did not have many links left after the officials got finished with New York, and Daniels was the next in succession at the end of a wild, 106-96 loss to the Phoenix Suns.

"This was a strange game ... a very strange game," said Nets Coach Kevin Loughery after the controversial

National Basketball Association contest. "I didn't know what was going on out there."

Loughery knew even less after he got his second technical foul and was ejected with about four minutes remaining. Loughery, who had run-ins with referee Jack Madden in the old American Basketball Association, protested one of his calls with his usual ferocity.

Madden did a complete job on the Nets' coaching staff, also tossing out angry Rod Thorn, Loughery's assistant, at another point. John Williamson, one of the Nets' top players, protested too much and he, too, was thrown out during the argumentative game.

That left it up to team leader Nate Archibald to run the club, but when he fouled out at the end, Daniels wound up as the coach.

Budget Projections Hold Bright Hopes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic projections that could raise President-elect Jimmy Carter's hopes of balancing the federal budget during his term are being considered by a congressional panel.

Congressional Budget Director Alice M. Rivlin was scheduled to testify on the economic projections today before the Senate-House Joint Economic Committee.

The Congressional Budget Office, in a report issued Wednesday, said this year's estimated $50.6-billion deficit could turn into a surplus of as much as $78 billion by the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1980.

That would fulfill a major Carter campaign promise — to balance the federal budget by the time his four-year term ends in 1980.

But the budget office report carefully stressed that its projections should not be considered predictions.

Mrs. Rivlin said the projections "are not to be construed as inevitable or a forecast of what will occur." The figures are tied to a number of assumptions about what may happen to the economy in the next five years.

Moreover, the projections assume continuation of funding of government programs at current levels. They do not allow for further tax cuts, new big spending programs, changes in the international situation that could send defense spending up or down, or funding of some controversial military projects.

Carter met in Plains, Ga., on Wednesday with 16 economic experts, some of whom may become top financial advisers in the new Democratic administration. A spokesman for the President-elect said there was no agreement among the conferees on what the economy will need in the way of stimulation next year.

Carter has said he could recommend a tax cut or some other form of economic stimulation early next year if the economy fails to recover from its slump, but a spokesman for the President-elect said there was no agreement at the conference on the tax cut concept.

The Budget Office presented its projections as a base line against which Congress might judge the effect of its actions.

Saying "considerable uncertainty exists," the report said it was assumed for purposes of calculation that the economy, as measured by the Gross National Product, will rise at a rate starting at 5.5 per cent a year and tapering to 4.5 per cent in 1982. The projection said that under current conditions the unemployment percentage should decline over the same period from 7.8 per cent to 4.1 per cent.

A growing economy, which would increase personal incomes, could boost government tax collections enough so they would overtake increased spending, the report suggested.

Commemorative Cancellation Plan Changed

A modification in procedures for ordering first day cancellation of new U.S. issues of commemorative postage stamps will commence January 1977.

Stamp collectors may purchase their own stamps at their local post office and affix them to their envelopes. Within 15 calendar days after the first day of issue, the envelope must be mailed under cover to the Postmaster at the post office performing the first day cancellation.

The change in procedures benefits both the collectors and the Postal Service. By affixing their own stamps, collectors have control over centering, perforations and arrangement of the stamps in the desired configuration. Since the stamps are already affixed to the envelope, the processing system at the first day city is simplified and the Postal Service can provide faster return of the envelope to the stamp collector. Postal Service operating costs are also reduced significantly.

When a collector affixes their own stamps, the Postal Service is relieved of the administrative burden of accounting for remittances, especially troublesome coins taped to cardboard. The collector is not required to write a check or purchase a money order since cancellations are provided free of charge by the Postal Service.

Assembly May Get 3 Big Utility Issues

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Chairman C. Luther Heckman of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio sees three major issues facing the next General Assembly as a lifeline program, changes in rate design, and the structure of the commission.

He told the Columbus Bar Association Wednesday that the rate making formula the legislature passed earlier this year for PUCO does no harm but contains no substantial benefit.

"It changes the rules of the game a little but that's about all," he said.

"Politics creep into a lot of things the legislature does," he added.

"Did it make rates lower," he asked. "I can't see that this legislation did it. But I can see that the public wants it. I call it lying to the public and that is bad."

The legislation "is in the public interest if it is properly understood but doesn't do anything about the bare problem," Heckman said.

The law which took effect Sept. 1 abolishes reconstruction costs and substitutes original cost of plants and equipment as a basis for projecting rates for utilities.

Scouts Stage National Jamboree

The National Boy Scout Jamboree will be held at Moraine State Park in Northwestern Pennsylvania August 3-9, 1977.

Local boys who are 12 years old or older and have obtained the First Class rank are eligible to attend. There are openings for 198 boys in the Central Ohio Council and these boys will be formed into five troops.

More than 31,000 scouts and some 8000 leaders are expected to attend this once-in-a-lifetime event for young men. The main emphasis is to learn leadership and program ideas which they can apply upon their return home to improve the quality of scouting.

Featured activities will be fishing and marksmanship contests, youth forums on current events, wind, water, and solar energy projects, area cultural centers, and spectacular opening and closing gala events.

Scouts from the local council will leave by bus on August 2, 1977 and will return on August 11, 1977.

This will be the last opportunity for scouts now registered to enjoy this event, since the next jamboree will be held in 1981. Applications can be obtained from local scout masters, with the first payment due in the council office by January 1, 1977.

Local service organizations, businesses, or individuals who would like to sponsor a boy for this most worthy trip may contact District Coordinator Howard Snook at 474-2256.

The law which took effect Sept. 1 abolishes reconstruction costs and substitutes original cost of plants and equipment as a basis for projecting rates for utilities.

Heckman said a better system would merely require utilities to present their costs of doing business and allowing PUCO to add a reasonable profit to that base.

"I think the public could understand that," he added.

Heckman noted that the law has not yet been applied to a rate case and said, "It is difficult to do anything but guess at the result."

Lifeline legislation, which he sees as a major issue for the next General Assembly, would lower rates for basic consumption for necessary utilities such as gas and electricity.

Changes in the rate design, he said, might alter the structure of the recently passed law and "that's where the next ball game is."

He said changes in PUCO structure might take many forms and did not suggest areas such legislation could affect.

Scouts Stage National Jamboree

The National Boy Scout Jamboree will be held at Moraine State Park in Northwestern Pennsylvania August 3-9, 1977.

Local boys who are 12 years old or older and have obtained the First Class rank are eligible to attend. There are openings for 198 boys in the Central Ohio Council and these boys will be formed into five troops.

More than 31,000 scouts and some 8000 leaders are expected to attend this once-in-a-lifetime event for young men. The main emphasis is to learn leadership and program ideas which they can apply upon their return home to improve the quality of scouting.

Featured activities will be fishing and marksmanship contests, youth forums on current events, wind, water, and solar energy projects, area cultural centers, and spectacular opening and closing gala events.

Scouts from the local council will leave by bus on August 2, 1977 and will return on August 11, 1977.

This will be the last opportunity for scouts now registered to enjoy this event, since the next jamboree will be held in 1981. Applications can be obtained from local scout masters, with the first payment due in the council office by January 1, 1977.

Local service organizations, businesses, or individuals who would like to sponsor a boy for this most worthy trip may contact District Coordinator Howard Snook at 474-2256.
